YOUNG—At a Sanatorium, after a lingering illness, Harriette, last surviving child of the late Robert Young, Limerick, aged 27 years.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

The relatives of the late James F. Egan, of The Hollands, Artane, return sincere thanks to the many friends who sent messages of sympathy. Owing to the large number of telegrams received, it has been impossible to send separate acknowledgment. Kindly accept this acknowledgment.

Rev. Daniel Hennessy and family, Mount View, Inchicore, beg to tender their sincere thanks to the numerous kind friends and relatives who sent cards, telegrams, and letters of sympathy in their sad bereavement, and trust they will accept this as a small but grateful acknowledgment.

IN MEMORIAM.

BOYCE—In affectionate remembrance of my dear brother, Janie Craig, who died 12th November, 1918.

CORR—In affectionate remembrance of James D. Corr, late General, who died at Ballymena, 13th November, 1917.

FREEMAN—In loving memory of our dear son, who died 12th November, 1918, at 20 years of age. Deeply he suffered as his body wasted away, Till he was called by his sorrowing wife, father, mother, sister, and sister-in-law.

Father, in Thy gracious keeping, Leave we now our loved one sleeping."

HARLEY—In remembrance of Gustavus Wakely, Colonel, 19 Fleet st., Dublin, who died November 13, 1918. Deeply mourned.

Reduce the Air Ration below Health Point.

The natural consequence is that the breathing is affected, the bronchial tubes or bronchi become inflamed, and cough, more or less serious, follows. If neglected the entire respiratory system is worked and thus many Consumptives are made. Children suffer more frequently from such complaints than do their elders, the death rate among the very young being truly appalling, and in too many instances due entirely to thoughtlessness.

The World's Supreme Remedy

LAW REPORTS.

FIREMAN SUES BOARD OF TRADE OFFICER.—At Nisi Prius, yesterday, Mr. Justice Samuels and a jury of the city of Dublin tried an action in which John Hughes sued Herbert Montague Hamsbury to recover £50, which the defendant detained and refused to pay to the plaintiff under the following circumstances, as detailed by counsel:—The plaintiff was a marine fireman and trimmer, when in 1917, he, at Glasgow, joined the mercantile service during the war period. Instead of being sent on a merchant ship he was sent on a mine-sweeper on the north coast of Scotland. As soon as he had an opportunity he "shipped," and refused to continue in work for which he had not joined. The result was that he was rewarded as a deserter, and detectives were looking for him, but failed to find him. In September, 1917, Hughes joined the s.s. Pastoor as fireman, and sailed to South America. He worked on board that vessel for thirty-seven weeks, and on his return to England he was entitled to £27. Of that sum he had received £7, and when he was boarding the ship at Glasgow in May, 1918, he received from the Mercantile Marine Office an order for £50, to be paid to him at the Dublin office in Eden quay. On the 27th April, 1919, the plaintiff presented the order for payment, but the defendant, who is Superintendent of the Mercantile Marine Office, said that he had orders not to pay "until other matters are settled." The "other matters" referred to his desertion. A subsequent application, met with a like denial, but through his solicitor the defendant offered to pay, that, however, was after the writ had been issued, and when the plaintiff's claim was established. The defendant held the paying order for nearly twelve months, during which the plaintiff was at sea. The following is an example:—evidence, Mr. Charles Boyle, his solicitor, was examined, and said that he had, in company with Hughes, called at the office of the defendant, and asked for payment, which was refused. Messrs. D. and T. Fitzgerald had offered to pay the money if he brought his client to the Marine Office, but he declined to be a decoy duck to lead his client into the hands of the detectives. Mr. Wylie, opening the case to the jury for the defendant, said that the money had been paid over to the solicitor, and that this was an action for costs. Mr. Hamilton, for the defendant, said that he was Superintendent of the Board of Trade Office in Dublin. In May, 1918, the plaintiff came into the office, and presented the paying order. Witness said, "Half a minute!" and turned aside. The plaintiff, evidently suspicious, left the order on the counter and fled. After the action did not see him until he came into the office on May 6th, 1919, in company with Mr. Boyle. He was willing to pay if the plaintiff had given him an chance of satisfying himself as to his identity. In the meantime he had learnt that Hughes was a deserter. At the rising of the Court for the luncheon interval, Mr. Leech, K.C., addressing the judge, said that he had been told that detectives were waiting in the precincts to arrest the plaintiff. Mr. Justice Samuels said that nothing of the kind should be done while the man was a litigant in Court. Mr. Wylie objected to such a statement being made by Mr. Leech in the presence of the jury. On resuming after luncheon, Mr. Leech asked that Mr. Boyle should go into the witness box and state what had taken place. The judge said that he would not allow anything of the kind. The incident was closed. Mr. Hamilton, for the defendant, said that he was always willing to pay the man, and that in what he had done he was acting on the instructions of his superiors in regard to the police and the plaintiff. When Mr. Boyle was in the office he (defendant) telephoned for the police, but the plaintiff and Mr. Boyle left before they arrived. At the close of the evidence defendant's counsel renewed the requisition for direction, and the judge directed a verdict for the defendant. Mr. Leech, K.C., and Mr. Geoghegan (instructed by Messrs. Wm. Smyth and Sons) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Wylie, K.C., and Mr. G. W. Shannon (instructed by Messrs. D. and T. Fitzgerald) appeared for the defendant.

WATERFORD BRIDGE TOLLS.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice Dodd, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Ronan, in the case of the Waterford Corporation against Murphy was argued on a case stated. It involved a question affecting the powers of the Corporation in the matter of the imposition of tolls on ships passing through the bridge over the River Suir. The case was heard by Lord Justice Ronan in the Summer Assizes at Waterford as an appeal from a civil bill decree for £5 made by the Acting County Court Judge there. The question raised by the Corporation to be due by Ellen M. Murphy (trading as Messrs. Murphy and Co.) for attendance fees on the opening of the bridge to allow defendant's vessels to pass through. It was admitted that the bridge had been opened on five occasions for the purpose mentioned on the claim for fees, in which the by-laws provided for. The by-laws were made by the Corporation on July 1st, 1913, and were confirmed by the Board of Trade in August of that year. The questions for the Court were:—(1) Is No. 1 (G) of the by-laws (relating to the opening of the bridge) of itself ultra vires? (2) If it can the question of if its validity be inquired into by this Court, having regard to the concluding paragraph of Section 10 of the Bridge Act, providing that a printed copy of the by-laws and regulations, made and confirmed under the Acts, should be conclusive evidence of their validity in any prosecution or proceeding under the Acts? The Court were decided unanimously that the Act under which the regulations were made restricted the powers of the Corporation with regard to the making of by-laws as to the time and mode of vessels passing, and did not give them power to impose a charge, and that therefore the by-laws were ultra vires so far as they attempted to impose a charge. The appeal was accordingly allowed, and the civil bill was dismissed with costs to the appellant (the defendant). Mr. W. Gibson, K.C., and Mr. Kinahan (instructed by Mr. P. A. Murphy) appeared for the Corporation; Mr. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. O'Byrne (instructed by Mr. G. A. Nolan) appeared for the defendant.

DUBLIN SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS (INCORPORATED).

At the weekly meeting of the Committee of the Dublin Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, held at 6, Upper Ely place, Mr. Ely presided. The following were also present:—Miss Tuckey, Mrs. Bethan, Mr. William Perrin, Mr. J. P. Butler, J.P., and C. E. Williams Hall, secretary and inspector.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, confirmed, and signed. Seventeen cases of cruelty were reported to the inspectors during the week; nine are to be summoned, three to be cautioned, four suspended for further consideration, and on one no order was made. The list of cases obtained during the week in cases already reported was read. Reports on dogs sold and claimed at the Dogs' Home, Grand Canal quay, during the week were submitted.

Minutes of the Dogs' Home Committee, with reference to repairs, painting, etc., were read, approved, and signed. A letter from the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was read, relative to alleged cruelty to a goat in the provinces. The Secretary stated that he was inquiring into the matter. A reply from the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland was read relative to the alleged ill-treatment of fowl in transit, and orders made thereon.

The inspectors reported on their visits to the markets and special visits to the North Wall relative to shipping of cattle and fowl.

CHILD WELFARE EXHIBITION.

The Health and Child Welfare Exhibition belonging to the Women's National Health Association was opened by Dr. Warnock in Donegal on Tuesday. The children from the adjacent schools attended during the morning hours, and in the afternoon and evening there was a good attendance both of townspeople and those from adjoining districts of Killymard and Inver. Much interest was evinced in the demonstrations and the lectures. The establishment of a nurse for the town is hoped for as a result of the interest awakened in child welfare work. The exhibition continues on to-day. The Women's National Health Association has also received a letter from Mr. MacGeough, clerk of the Monaghan Urban Council, stating that the exhibition created great interest in child welfare in the town, and would certainly have good results.

DUBLIN THEATRE PROSECUTED.

ALLOWING OBSTRUCTION.

Yesterday, in the Southern Police Court, before Mr. Cooper, K.C., the Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd., was prosecuted at the instance of the Dublin Corporation for permitting obstruction in one of the passages leading from the refreshment bar to the pit during a performance on Saturday evening, 11th October.

Mr. Burke, Assistant Law Agent to the Corporation, and Mr. Smylie (instructed by Messrs. Norris Goddard and Davis) appeared for the defendant company.

Mr. Burke said the prosecution was brought under the 36th Section of the Public Health Amendment Act, 1890, which provides that, during performances in all places of public amusement, all passages of ingress and egress be kept free of obstruction and crowding. The Act was put into force in Dublin by a resolution passed by the urban authority, and the question had been litigated on a good many years ago before Mr. Swifte, who decided that the resolution was intra vires.

Mr. Smylie said it might shorten the case if at that stage he admitted, on behalf of the Theatre Company, that there had been a technical breach. On the night in question, in a passage leading from the bar, some time after it had been closed at 10 o'clock, a number of persons who had been enjoying the privileges of the bar had come out, and instead of resuming their seats, remained standing against the wall along the passage to the pit. Their not going at once to their seats was a trouble not confined to that theatre alone, but was experienced by the management of other city theatres. On the night in question the men had just come out from the bar, and the Inspector of the Corporation had come along to the point of the passage where they were standing. The Theatre Company admitted after, that there was to some extent an obstruction, but in no way of a serious character or such as would endanger the lives of the audience.

Mr. Burke disagreed, and said his information was that there were 31 people standing in the passage at the time, and there was no standing room for them in the pit.

Mr. Smylie said that that was not so. When the seats were filled no other persons were admitted after.

Mr. Cooper asked if the persons had been standing long in the passage. It would very materially affect the case if they had been there for any length of time.

Mr. Walter Butler, Inspector for the Corporation, stated that he counted 31 people standing in the passage from the pit to the bar on the night of October 11th. They blocked up the entire passage on the side on which they stood, and no one could pass. There were no vacant seats at the time.

To Mr. Smylie—When I asked the theatre attendant, after finding the persons in the passage, if there were any vacant seats, he did not answer, but shook his head.

Mr. Wright, Manager of the Queen's Theatre, in answer to Mr. Smylie, said it was not a fact that more persons were admitted than there was room for. It was difficult sometimes to deal with the crowd and keep the passage free when they were leaving the bar, and the company had applied to the Board of Trade to have the wall removed, but the Board could not see its way to allow them to do so. There were no more than 14 or 15 persons standing against the wall when the Inspector arrived.

Mr. Burke said on 15th April last, for a similar offence, the company was fined £20. That had not the desired effect, and he asked that a penalty be imposed that would make them carry out the law in the interests of the public.

Mr. Smylie said the trouble complained of was not confined to the Queen's Theatre alone. In the present case there was no actual obstruction. The manager had endeavoured to prevent it to the utmost, and had reduced it to a minimum.

Mr. Cooper said he was satisfied there had been a breach of the law, and that the people in the pit were not all properly provided with seats. If it had been on one occasion that such a prosecution was brought against the company he might have taken a lenient view of the present case, but having regard to the fact that it was the second prosecution this year for a like offence, he felt he would not be doing his duty to the public if he did not impose a fine of £20.

The Irish Times.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1919.

On Monday night at 8 o'clock the Prince of Wales crossed from Canada into the United States and left for Washington with Mr. Lansing.

Telegrams from Indianapolis announce that the General Committee of Miners decided yesterday morning to "call off" the soft coal strike in the United States, thus complying with the order of the Court at Indianapolis.

In the House of Lords yesterday the Constabulary and Police (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

Mr. Bonar Law, in the House of Commons yesterday, admitted that General Seely is about to resign the office of Under-Secretary of State for War and Deputy-Air Minister. It is understood that his decision is due to differences with the War Cabinet in regard to the treatment and future status of the Air Force.

On the motion of Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen the House of Commons yesterday gave a second reading to the Agriculture and Fisheries (Council, etc.) Bill, which applies to England and Wales.

Speaking on the League of Nations in London yesterday, Mr. Balfour referred to the celebrations of that day, and said that if the repetition of wars and an incalculable calamity was to be prevented for the future, it could only be through the beneficent operation of the League of Nations. Critics of the League had no substitute for it.

The evidence in the Douglas Pennant inquiry concluded yesterday. Lord Wrenbury announced that the Committee were unanimously of opinion that the charges of immorality had failed. The Committee's full report will be made to the House of Commons without delay.

The first anniversary of Armistice Day was celebrated in Dublin yesterday, all work and traffic ceasing for the two minutes' silence as a tribute to the memory of the men who fell during the war. Some exciting scenes, in which students of Trinity College and the National University took part, were witnessed during the morning.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland was the principal guest at a Service dinner in Trinity College, Dublin, last evening to celebrate the armistice anniversary. His Excellency commended the service which Trinity College graduates did in the war, and the work of its Officers' Training Corps.

The Prince Royal of Arabia and party yesterday visited the racing stables at Phœnix Park, the Four Courts, and Trinity College. To-day they leave for Belfast.

The Irish Woollen Manufacturers Association yesterday entertained at luncheon in the Gresham Hotel several ex-Government control officials who had to deal with the woollen trade during the war. Handsome presentations were made to their guests. In the course of speeches after luncheon several gentlemen spoke of the present fortunate position of the wool trade in Ireland. It was stated that the home consumption of Irish wool had greatly increased.

Yesterday policemen and soldiers raided the house occupied by Dail Eireann, 76 Harcourt street, Dublin, seized a quantity of documents, and arrested nine men who were found in the place.

Owing to a strike of some 1,400 waggon builders and others at the Great Southern and Western Railway Company's Works at Inchicore, no goods trains were run yesterday from the Kingsbridge.

The Most Rev. B. J. Plunket was enthroned Bishop of Meath in St. Patrick's Church, Trim, yesterday. In the course of his address he said that a few living witnesses of holy lives were a better answer to a careless, sceptical world than any number of sermons or books on theology.

The damage to business premises in Cork, caused during the riots on Sunday and Monday nights, was very extensive, the damage to glass alone being estimated at £2,000.

In London yesterday the Stock Market was dull, with a fairly pronounced reaction in speculative departments. The monetary outlook was chiefly responsible for a marked fall in Government Stocks. The money market was unsettled by fears of a further advance in the Bank rate to 7 per cent. Money was in ample supply, and day-to-day money was loaned at 4-4½ per cent. Discount rates were hard. In Dublin the Stock Market was quieter. There was some selling of Coats Shares. Dunlops were firm, and Brunner Mond strong.

The American Labour Crisis.

Yesterday morning, after a session which lasted for seventeen hours, the General Committee of Miners in the United States decided to cancel the order to strike. Thus, technically at any rate, the great American coal strike seems to have come to an end. It will be remembered that the order to strike in the bituminous coalfields was made on October 15th. The Government issued a temporary injunction which forbade the men's leaders to take any part in the strike, and, furthermore, forbade the use or distribution of strike funds. In the Federal Court at Indianapolis, on Saturday last, Judge Anderson made the injunction permanent. He commanded the Executives of the Miners' Union to withdraw and cancel the strike order by last night; in other words, he declared the strike illegal, and placed all participators in it under a legal ban. All the resources of the United States Government were mobilised against the strikers. Had the Executives refused to comply with Judge Anderson's injunction, all the leaders would have been arrested at once, and every striker would have been liable to a fine or imprisonment at the discretion of the Court. To ignore the injunction would have been lunacy. Therefore, it has been obeyed; but whether or not the strike has been settled is a very different question. "We comply with the injunction under protest," declare the leaders. "We are Americans; we cannot fight our Government. That is all." Thus the leaders; but what about the men? Nearly half a million miners are on strike, and the mere cancellation of the order does not necessarily mean that the rank and file will return to work. What it does mean—and more cannot be said with certainty—is that the leaders of the strike have kept within the law. They have secured themselves against arrest; but further developments are not at all improbable in view of the great wave of class antagonism which is spreading over the United States from the Hudson to the Pacific.

Judge Anderson's injunction is a two-edged sword. On the one hand, it has brought the whole force of organised government to bear upon the strike; but, on the other, it has widened the breach between Labour and Capital in the United States. Labour is unanimous in its condemnation of the order. The American Federation of Labour has taken its stand definitely on the side of the strikers. "By all the facts of the case the strike is justified. We endorse it." Such is the opinion of the Federation. It continues: "The autocratic action of our Government in these proceedings is of such a nature that it staggers the human mind." This Federation has a membership of some 4,000,000 workers; therefore, its strong statement on behalf of the strikers is very ominous. The four railway brotherhoods, which do not belong to the Federation of Labour, have also made all preparations for a strike in spite of the fact that the coal strike has been declared illegal. Altogether the temper of American Labour seems to be very dangerous. There is a general feeling among the working classes that the issue has been forced by Capital. The steel strikers have just suffered defeat, and Labour thinks that a deliberate attempt is being made to arrest its development. It must not be forgotten that American Labour is virtually in its infancy. It is still moving along the road over which European Labour strode a decade ago, and, indeed, is just beginning to find its feet. For that reason it is more pressionable than its elder brother on this side of the ocean. It is more liable to be influenced by extreme ideas and to fall victim to the snares which await the unwary. America is the greatest example of a capitalistic State in the world. Labour must either be crushed or conciliated. Judge Anderson's injunction suggests that the former course is likely to be adopted, and, if such be the case, a long and desperate struggle is inevitable.

The apostles of Bolshevism are clever men. They have failed in Germany; they have been routed in England; but they have never lost sight of America. In Europe the working classes are virtually homogeneous. In England they are English, in France they are French. In America, however, they contain among their number the scourings of every country in the world. The leaders may be American pur sang, but the rank and file is recruited from abroad. The Russian, Polish, and Slav elements are very strong, and among them the disciples of Lenin and Trotsky have been active. They are scattered throughout the United States from Boston to San Francisco, and from North Dakota to the Rio Grande. As missionaries of Bolshevism no more suitable agents could be found. The Assistant Attorney-General, Mr. Garvan, has published documents which were seized during the recent "Red raids" in the United States. They are printed in Russian, and contain what one might call the terms of reference of the Bolshevist agents. One of the ideals to be achieved is "the complete destruction of the private control of natural resources and capital, and the complete destruction of a social system whereby the rule of one man over another is enforced." Furthermore, the shooting of military, police, and gendarmes is openly advocated. Here we have Bolshevism naked and unashamed. Naturally, American Labour does not subscribe to such a creed. Mr. Gompers detests it probably as much as Mr. Rockefeller; but, at the same time, the very presence of documents of such an anarchical character in the country constitutes a grave danger to the State. That danger is intensified by the discontent of the working classes as a whole. If "the right to strike" is denied by the American Government, "converts" to the Muscovite doctrines will be numerous. The illness of President Wilson is another disturbing factor. He, of all men, is fitted to grasp the full significance of Labour's attitude. Little can be gained by clamping a lid upon a pot of boiling water. Judge Anderson's injunction may have postponed the radical readjustment of relations between Capital and Labour in the United States. Between postponement and achievement, however, there is a world of difference.

The Middle Classes.

The Medical Correspondent of The Times has written an article on "The Death of the Middle Classes." The title is startling, but it is justified by the facts which the writer marshals to shew that, unless the social and economic conditions of Great Britain undergo a radical change, the days of the middle classes are numbered. When both the birth-rate and the marriage-rate of any class show a steady and continuing decrease only one conclusion is possible. Of course, the decline in the birth-rate is an almost universal feature of modern society. The present rate for England and Wales is 17.7 per thousand, and for London 16.1. In 1851-1860 the rate for England and Wales was 34.1; in 1881-1890 it was 32.4; and in 1901-1910 it was 27.2. During the period of sixty years, however, the death-rate fell by 30 per cent.—largely as a result of the reduction of infant mortality among the poor. In the working and industrial classes falling birth-rate has been balanced by falling death-rate. In the middle classes, while the birth-rate is falling rapidly, the death-rate, never very high, remains virtually unchanged; thus they are sinking surely in the matter of population. The testimony of medical men confirms the story of the official statistics. During the last ten years—especially since the beginning of the war—the middle class family of five or four has become the family of two or one. The cause of this decline is no secret. Thousands of young couples have decided that, with the present cost of living, the present burden of taxation, and the present price of houses, a "family," in the old-fashioned sense of the word, is impossible. The same and similar causes have reduced the middle class marriage-rate. The general marriage-rate fell in 1917 to 13.8 per thousand of the population, or 2.6 below the average for the five years 1911-1915. In all classes—but especially in the middle classes—marriages are being postponed on account of housing and food difficulties. The proportion of bachelors marrying at ages over thirty-five has increased notably during the last four years. Thirty years ago 63 per cent. of the spinsters who married were under twenty-five years of age. Of those who married in 1917 only 54.8 were under twenty-five. It is certain, therefore, that among the middle classes marriages are becoming not only fewer in number, but later in respect of the ages of the contracting parties. The class chiefly affected is that which lives on incomes—usually earned incomes—that range between £300 and £1,000 per annum. It is the class which has been described truly and often as the back-bone of the nation. It reaped the smallest profits from the war and made the biggest sacrifices. It contributed a very large number of officers to the Army. It is the class that feeds the Universities, mans the professions, provides the country with a majority of its thinkers, organisers, and administrators. Moreover, as the Correspondent reminds us, many of its families have a tradition of service—a medical, legal, or clerical tradition—that is of immense value to the State. Yet this indispensable class is declining, and will perish altogether unless statesmen intervene to

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

IRELAND—THE NEXT STEP.

Lord Dunraven, in a letter to The Times to-day, writes:—The Convention came very near achieving success, and the causes of its failure to do so are easily traced. But nothing can be gained by investigating them, and a much more important matter is—"What is to be the next step in Ireland?" The proposal to enter into negotiations with Sinn Fein on the part of the Government seems to me to amount to asking the King to appoint plenipotentaries to meet the plenipotentaries of Mr. President de Valera. Nevertheless, Lord Southborough's suggestion is one which might quite possibly open a profitable door. It may be that the Irish Republican leaders realise that a Republic can only be established by force, and they may perceive that, if Great Britain sought reprisals, it would entail disastrous consequences to Ireland. The railway strike did not last long enough to prove that material separation means the stoppage of the internal economic life of Ireland just as surely as sticking a pin in a watch stops it. England can do without Ireland economically, for she can rely on the Continent. But Ireland cannot do without British markets, for the Continent cannot absorb her produce. If the lesson of the strike has gone home, it is possible that an informal meeting, such as Lord Southborough suggests, initiated by negotiators who would not be tied down by responsibility on either side, might be of value.

THE CABINET AND IRELAND.

The Parliamentary Correspondent of The Times to-day writes:—The Cabinet began their consideration yesterday of the report of the Committee on the Irish question. Further meetings will have to be held before the new Home Rule Bill is signed, sealed, and delivered, but there is now little doubt that the measure will be introduced in the House of Commons before the end of the present sittings. The Speaker's Conference on Federal Devolution met again at the House of Commons yesterday, and took up the question of the powers to be transferred from the Imperial Parliament to the subordinate Legislatures. This important branch of the inquiry was still under discussion when the Conference adjourned until to-morrow.

THE LATE CARDINAL HARTMANN.

The late Cardinal Hartmann, says The Times, was throughout his career a supporter of Prussianism. His public support of Germany's methods of prosecuting the war found expression in a speech he made early in 1915, after the Germans had over-run Belgium, when he said that "God had been so far with the Germans in the war, because it was unthinkable that He would permit Atheistic Freemasonic France, and the violent Orthodox Church of Russia to trample under foot the fresh, joyous, religious life of Germany." In December of the same year, when the German peace move was afoot, Cardinal Hartmann visited Rome to inquire into the possibilities of pressing the question of peace through the medium of the Pope. But at that time the Pope realised the uselessness of attempting to open negotiations on any basis that would have satisfied Germany, and Cardinal Hartmann returned to Cologne, considerably disappointed with the failure of his mission. In the later stages of the war Cardinal Hartmann several times visited the Western Front, and during a Pastoral tour in April, 1918, celebrated Pontifical High Mass in the presence of the Kaiser. On this occasion he pledged to the Kaiser "the continued sacrifice and resistance of all Catholic soldiers in the German Army till glorious victory and early peace should be assured."

COURT CIRCULAR.

VICEREGAL LODGE, DUBLIN.

TUESDAY.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant received at the Viceregal Lodge a deputation from the Irish Federation of Discharged and Demobilised Soldiers and Sailors, Dublin Branch, who were introduced by Mr. W. P. Walker, Secretary.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant was the guest this evening at Trinity College at a reunion dinner of past and present members of the College who have served in the war. Captain R. B. S. Redford, A.D.C., and Captain J. de Pret, A.D.C., were in attendance.

Lord Oranmore and Browne left the Lodge to-day.

PRINCE ROYAL OF ARABIA.

VISIT TO TRINITY COLLEGE.

The Prince Royal of Arabia, Faisal ibn Saud, Ahmad ibn Thunnayan, his cousin, and Abdulla al Qusabi, and the Arab gentlemen-in-waiting who form his party, accompanied by their interpreter, Mr. H. St. J. B. Philby, C.I.E., this (Tuesday) had a busy day of sight-seeing. Happily the weather conditions were excellent, considering the time of the year. It was cold, indeed, but there was no rain, and the sun shone brightly until evening.

The Prince and his entourage began the day with a visit to the racing stables at the Phœnix Park, accompanied by Mrs. Walsh, sister of Lord Justice O'Connor. They were shown round by Mr. Beard, jun. All enjoyed immensely the visit to the stables, and were deeply interested in this, the first exhibition they have had of British bloodstock. The historical fact of the original strain of the Arab gave them a double interest in the animals, which were much admired. On leaving the stables, the party were conducted to the Four Courts by Mrs. Walsh, and were shown over the library by Mr. Kelly, M.P., barrister-at-law.

After luncheon, the Prince Royal and party visited Trinity College, where they were received by the Provost and Mrs. Bernard, and conducted through the College buildings by a number of the Fellows and Professors, amongst whom were Professor White, King, Professor Pope, Professor A. C. Haddon, and Mr. E. H. Alton, ET.C.D. An address of welcome was read to them by Mr. Rifaat, an Egyptian student, who is an undergraduate in the Medical School. A short reply was made by the Prince's cousin. After partaking of coffee in the Provost's House, they visited the examination hall, the graduates' hall, the dining hall, the Engineering School, and the Medical School. Professor Lucas White King, Professor of Arabic, showed the Prince some ancient Arabic manuscripts which greatly interested them. They particularly admired the Library, over which they were shown by the College Librarian and Assistant Librarian. The party was afterwards entertained to tea in the Fellows' common room. The Gordon guns in the College grounds were pointed out, and grimly viewed by the party. On leaving the College the students gave them several rounds of hearty cheers, an ovation which greatly gratified the Prince. In the evening the Prince Royal and party were the guests at dinner of Sir John and Lady Arnott. They leave Dublin this morning for Belfast.

NEW PRIVY COUNCILLORS SWORN.

His Majesty, having been pleased to appoint Mr. Denis Stanislaus Henry, K.C., Attorney-General for Ireland, the Most Reverend John Henry Bernard, D.D., and Mr. John Campbell White, to be of His Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, they, on the 8th inst., in Council, took the usual oaths and their places at the Board accordingly.

YOUNG LIBERALS AND THE PREMIER.

Mr. Isaac Foot, the Liberal candidate for the Sutton Division of Plymouth, last night addressed a letter to Mr. Lloyd George drawing attention to a letter which the Prime Minister wrote to Lady Astor, the Coalition Unionist candidate, hoping that the electorate will return her to Parliament by a large majority. Mr. Foot reminds the right hon. gentleman of his utterances at a meeting of Liberals addressed by him just a year ago at Downing street. Mr. Foot's letter proceeds—"You cannot, surely, be unaware that I am standing here as a Liberal candidate, preaching the Liberalism you have always preached." The letter concludes—"We Young Liberals want to know whether you stand with us. We have work to do, and cannot wait. If you are, let us push on together. If you are not with us, we will read Browning's "Lost Leader" once again, and give ourselves with more devotion to the cause which is, happily, greater than one man, and more enduring than a single generation."

ARMISTICE DAY IN DUBLIN.

STRIKING SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES.

The two minutes' silence in recognition of the first anniversary of Armistice Day proved a markedly impressive event in Dublin yesterday. When the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month was chimed, a calm and stillness pervaded the entire city that was manifestation of the feelings of the people in regard to the solemnity of the occasion. The spontaneous manner in which the citizens responded to the desire of the King was alike admirable and creditable. Not a sound was heard during the brief period allotted for uniting in the simple service of silence and remembrance; vehicular traffic ceased as if by clock-work on the eleventh hour being tolled; work in all big industrial concerns, commercial establishments, public offices, and places of business was suspended; trains ceased running on the various railway systems; pedestrians stood still on the footpaths with hats doffed and heads reverently bowed, and in all other departments of work-a-day life the same regard for the solemnity of the occasion was observed.

AT COLLEGE GREEN.

The eleventh hour was eagerly looked forward to. From half-past ten o'clock onwards there was a noticeable increase in the numbers who usually parade the principal thoroughfares in the city. As the hour advanced, the sidewalks became more congested, and this was particularly noticeable in College Green, which seemed, as on all big occasions, to be the pivotal centre whereat sightseers and others interested should congregate. By eleven o'clock many thousands must have taken up a stand at this particular venue, and the signalling of the solemn hour was awaited in the most solemn manner possible. It was, from the weather point of view, a particularly fine morning. The streets, after a hard night's frost, were dry under foot, and the keen, crisp air prevailing was tempered by the warmth of the rays of the sun in a cloudless sky. Flags were flying from Trinity College, the Bank of Ireland, and all the principal buildings in converging streets, and all these symbols of tribute to the departed floated gaily in the breeze. When the clock above the entrance to Trinity College indicated the hour of eleven o'clock, the great bell of the College solemnly tolled eleven times. This was immediately followed by the lowering of the flag on the College to half-mast. At the same time the flags on the Bank of Ireland were dipped, and the same operation was performed on many other buildings. These incidents were signalised by an immediate hush. The tramcars came suddenly to a standstill, the current having been cut off at the electricity power station; all other vehicular traffic was stopped, and the great crowds assembled in College Green, as well as in many other parts, remained motionless. Nothing was more striking than to see the male portion of the immense gathering reverently doff their hats and bow their heads during the two minutes of solemn silence, and equally effective was the prompt stand to attention which marked the attitude of the many soldiers who happened to be on the scene at the time. There were little sympathetic incidents here and there which typified how keenly many in the throng felt during these few moments. The stillness was intense, and the tribute paid was a truly remarkable and memorable one.

BUSINESS RESUMED.

The end of the silence was signalled by the rehoisting of the flags to full mast, and as if it had been pre-arranged, although the act was a spontaneous one, the students of Trinity College, who thronged the area and railings in front of the building, broke into singing "God Save the King." The recital did not end with much fervour in the Anthem, and the great volume of sound, following so closely on the interval of silence preceding it, was markedly impressive. Traffic of all kinds was at once resumed. The delay of a couple of minutes in vehicular traffic showed the great congestion that can be occasioned even in this short space of time, and the policemen on "point" duty had a busy time of it for some time regulating matters to a normal state. It can be truthfully said, however, that the whole celebration was a great success, everyone of whom was put to effort to carry it out with the solemnity and impressiveness that befitted the occasion.

As in the centre of the city so in the neighbouring parts and suburbs. A fine example of the attitude of the employés in the many industrial concerns throughout the city was the way in which they responded to the signal to cease work. Sirens were blown and alarums sounded, and immediately there was a cessation of activities, everyone apparently taking part in the movement spontaneously, and with an evident desire to do honour to the dead. Not alone the departed, but the living who came through the holocaust and are yet very fortunately alive to tell the tale. Banks, Government offices, commercial and professional offices, all suspended the ordinary avocations of the day for the short period. Trams, trains, and other means of locomotion were brought to a halt, and the whole populace engaged in a solemn observance which was unique in history, and which will be remembered for many years to come as a fitting celebration to the memory of the heroes who fell in the great fight.

THE MILITARY BARRACKS.

There was considerable activity—perhaps more so than at any other place—at the various soldiers' barracks and camps in the city and vicinity. Solemn and impressive scenes were witnessed by many who gathered at the various barracks to watch the troops. Elaborate arrangements had been made for the ceremonial, and, in accordance with instructions, all watches were synchronised at Headquarters at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. At ten minutes to 11 o'clock all regimental bands and drums played in barracks the regimental march, and this was followed by the "Dead March." At 11 o'clock two guns were fired simultaneously from the Royal Barracks, following which came the regimental call, and then what is known in military circles as the long "G" call, which was sounded in all barracks by buglers, who were stationed by the commanding officers at such points. In the latter call all ranks stood to attention, regardless of what work or duty they were on, and the bands stopped playing. All guards, whether located in or from barracks, also turned out and presented arms. Flags were brought to half-mast during the interval, at the termination of which all bands played the National Anthem. Buglers then sounded the "Disperse," and, the guards having turned in and flags having been brought to full mast, normal work was resumed. It was an impressive ceremonial, and the troops taking part displayed their appreciation of the occasion by the way in which all ranks performed the evolutions associated with it.

At all the garrison schools in the Dublin District the two minutes' silence was observed. At the Royal Hibernian Military School at Phœnix Park the observance was particularly impressive. Shortly before 11 o'clock the boys formed up in front of the school Roll of Honour, which was decorated with a laurel wreath. This Roll, it should be stated, contains upwards of one hundred names of old boys of the school who lost their lives in the war. The boys were addressed by the Headmaster (Captain McCleesh), who explained the object of the gathering. As the school clock chimed the hour of eleven the "stand fast" was sounded by the combined buglers, when work of every description ceased throughout the school for two minutes. The signal for the resumption of work was given by the combined buglers and muffled drums sounding the "Last Post" at two minutes after 11 o'clock. The school flag was slowly lowered to half-mast during the interval, after which the boys sang "Land of Hope and Glory," and concluded by singing "God Save the King."

THE CHURCHES.

Armistice Day was not forgotten in the churches, and, in accordance with the request of the Archbishop of Dublin, opportunity was given to "commemorate the Divine gift of peace and the great sacrifices which won it, with due solemnity in the house of God." Services were held in a great many churches. All services were largely attended. In St. Patrick's Cathedral there were two Services, the first of which was at 10.30 a.m., when the national Cathedral was crowded with a devout congregation. The Service was conducted by the Very Rev. the Dean, Rev. Canon Kennedy, and Rev. E. H. F. Campbell (Succentor). The anthem was "I Heard a Voice from Heaven," the solo part in which was taken by Master Frank Harrison, the choir being made up of boy voices alone. At the hour the bells in the tower sounded eleven times all simultaneously, and after the two minutes' silence, the Succentor said the closing prayers. The afternoon Service, which began at four o'clock, and was conducted by the same clergymen, took the form of a Memorial and Thanksgiving Service, and was very impressive. The anthem was, "Blessed are the Departed," and it was most effectively rendered, the quartette, who sang admirably, being Master Bertie Irwin, Messrs. J. R.

TRINITY COLLEGE AND ARMISTICE DAY.

SERVICE DINNER.

LORD FRENCH AND OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS.

A Service dinner to celebrate the Armistice anniversary was held last evening at Trinity College, Dublin. About 260 members—Trinity College men who had served overseas—were present, and the event was characterised by much enthusiasm. The band of the 141st Squadron Royal Air Force played a selection of music during the evening. The principal guest was Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. The Right Hon. and Most Rev. the Provost presided. At the head of the table sat Captain H. J. L. Murphy, Major R. W. Tate, Rev. Canon M'Cleary, Mr. W. L. Smith, Rev. Colonel Murphy, Mr. J. C. Donaldson, Mr. J. K. Healy, Major-General Sawyer, Mr. E. W. S. Deale, Mr. H. S. Doig, Captain M'Walter, Captain Stephen Gwynn, Captain J. I. Kelly, Mr. F. V. Pruit, Mr. R. P. Ward, Mr. E. S. Lemass, Sir Arthur Ball, Major-General Russell, Mr. E. V. Longworth, Mr. B. C. Waller, Mr. C. J. Machey, Colonel J. Hunt.

The toast of "The King" was duly honoured.

Major Tate, O.B.E., proposed the health of the Lord Lieutenant, who, he said, was not only our beloved countryman, but a member of the College. He laid particular stress upon the fact that His Excellency was an honorary graduate of the University. (Applause.) He was perfectly certain that all present would agree with him that in the long list of Trinity College's distinguished sons there was not a single name of which they were more justly proud than of the name of Lord French of Ypres. (Applause.) On the occasion on which His Excellency received his honorary degree from the College it was his (Major Tate's) good fortune to introduce him, and therefore he was in some sense His Excellency's godfather. (Applause.) Lord French had accomplished great deeds, whose renown had spread all over the world. (Hear, hear.) The toast of the Lord Lieutenant had usually been coupled with the prosperity of Ireland, and he could not imagine how the two parts of the phrase could be separated. He could not imagine the prosperity of Ireland at a crisis like the present unless it was coupled with the name of Lord French. (Applause.)

The toast was honoured with enthusiasm.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT.

Lord French, who was warmly received, in responding thanked the company for the kind and generous reception which they had given to the toast. He could not adequately express the pleasure it gave him to accept their invitation to be present at that historic gathering. He used the word "historic" advisedly, for it was probably the first time, most certainly in Ireland, that so large a number of University men had met together in that hall who could, every one of them, justly claim to have taken a great and noble part in the most terrible war the world had ever known, and which has culminated in decisive and glorious victory. (Applause.) Those who were present had taken part in the war in many and varied branches of military activity, and many of them had a very large share in making the glorious record which the R.A.M.C. had won in this war. He knew that many of them had been engaged in scientific investigations which the war had so much required. (Applause.) But he thought that many of those present had at one time or another belonged to the Officers' Training Corps, which had probably given the main impulse to the military activities of Dublin University. (Hear, hear.) He knew a great deal about the history of the Officers' Training Corps from their inception thirteen years ago by Lord Haldane, when he was Secretary of State for War. The idea of utilising the enormous stores of knowledge and scientific talent that was to be found in Universities for purposes of national defence was, he thought, one of the most brilliant conceptions which had ever emanated from the brain of a military reformer. (Applause.) The idea was taken up with all the ardour which had ever been shown by Universities in any project to ensure efficient national defence, and when anything could be done for the good of the Empire. At that time he (Lord French) held the position of Inspector-General of the Forces, and it was his duty to visit different centres of learning—Oxford, Cambridge, and other Universities—for the purpose of watching the progress which was being made; and from the first he clearly foresaw the invaluable work which these Officers' Training Corps could do if ever the country came to be engaged in a great war. (Applause.) In the earliest days of the war the terrible losses that were incurred made the question of the supply of officers a most anxious and difficult one; and he thought it was as early as October, 1914, that he decided to form Officers' Training Schools at the front, exactly on the lines of the Officers' Training Corps at home. By that time a few territorial battalions had come out, and others were on the road. Amongst them there were one or two which were originally raised as Officers' Training Corps, and which included in their ranks large numbers of University men. With that nucleus he proceeded to form those schools, where officers were quickly instructed and which proved of such invaluable help to the Army in providing young officers. He looked back with sorrow to the terrible year of 1915, when he remembered all the glorious young lives which were sacrificed from those ranks for King and country. (Applause.)

TRINITY COLLEGE RECORD.

He particularly wished to think of them for the work which they did; and Dublin, of course, had a great share in that work. (Applause.) The following statistics were of interest in connection with the work which those of Dublin University had done:—There was an estimated total of 3,135 graduates and undergraduates and employés of Trinity College. Of these 417 were killed or died of wounds, while many of them had a very large share in making the glorious record which the R.A.M.C. had won in this war. He knew that many of them had been engaged in scientific investigations which the war had so much required. (Applause.) But he thought that many of those present had at one time or another belonged to the Officers' Training Corps, which had probably given the main impulse to the military activities of Dublin University. (Hear, hear.) He knew a great deal about the history of the Officers' Training Corps from their inception thirteen years ago by Lord Haldane, when he was Secretary of State for War. The idea of utilising the enormous stores of knowledge and scientific talent that was to be found in Universities for purposes of national defence was, he thought, one of the most brilliant conceptions which had ever emanated from the brain of a military reformer. (Applause.) The idea was taken up with all the ardour which had ever been shown by Universities in any project to ensure efficient national defence, and when anything could be done for the good of the Empire. At that time he (Lord French) held the position of Inspector-General of the Forces, and it was his duty to visit different centres of learning—Oxford, Cambridge, and other Universities—for the purpose of watching the progress which was being made; and from the first he clearly foresaw the invaluable work which these Officers' Training Corps could do if ever the country came to be engaged in a great war. (Applause.) In the earliest days of the war the terrible losses that were incurred made the question of the supply of officers a most anxious and difficult one; and he thought it was as early as October, 1914, that he decided to form Officers' Training Schools at the front, exactly on the lines of the Officers' Training Corps at home. By that time a few territorial battalions had come out, and others were on the road. Amongst them there were one or two which were originally raised as Officers' Training Corps, and which included in their ranks large numbers of University men. With that nucleus he proceeded to form those schools, where officers were quickly instructed and which proved of such invaluable help to the Army in providing young officers. He looked back with sorrow to the terrible year of 1915, when he remembered all the glorious young lives which were sacrificed from those ranks for King and country. (Applause.)

THE COLLEGE.

Captain E. S. Lemass proposed the toast of "The College." He spoke of the great loss which the College had sustained by the death of Provost Sir John Mahaffy, than whom few men had done more for the University. They would always remember those noble men who went forth from the College, and who fell fighting for their King and country. (Applause.)

The toast was duly honoured.

The Provost, responding, said that it might be thought that in honouring this toast they were honouring themselves; but the toast was not merely intended to honour those who were assembled within these walls; it represented all that the College stood for, its best traditions, its spirit of comradeship and loyalty. (Applause.) The spirit of loyalty was deep-rooted in all their hearts, and that tradition was expressed at the beginning of the war without any loudly-expressed resolution. That was the spirit which moved Trinity men to take part in the great crusade. Not only did the young men in the College answer the call, but from all parts of the world Trinity men came back to fight for freedom in the spirit of loyalty which they had learnt within these walls. The spirit of comradeship and loyalty which was fostered in Trinity bound men together with a very special bond, and as they were assembled there that evening their hearts were full of thankfulness to the old mother which bred them all. (Applause.) The names and memory of those of their comrades who had fallen in the war would always be held in honour. (Applause.) He was grateful for having been permitted to take a small part in that celebration, and to express the hope that Trinity's best traditions may continue from generation to generation. (Applause.)

The Provost announced that he had received a message of fraternal greetings from the President of Queen's University Service Club, Belfast, who were also celebrating the occasion, and that a reply had been sent heartily reciprocating the good wishes.

POSITION IN RUSSIA.

BALTIC STATES CONFERENCE.

BOLSHEVIK ATTACKS HELD UP.

Reuter's Agency learns that the conferences of the Baltic States on the question of the Bolshevik pourparlers were opened at Dorpat on the 9th instant. Besides Esthonia, Lettonia, and Lithuania, Poland and Finland are also represented. According to an unofficial report received in London, the idea of an alliance between the border States was received with enthusiasm, as affording a means of settling the Russian problem.

YUDENITCH'S RETREAT.

According to information received by the Esthonian Legation in London, General Yudenitch's retreat continues. He has lost half of his force, composed of Bolshevik deserters, who have now returned to the Bolshevik ranks. Military authorities express the view that General Yudenitch cannot undertake any further offensive during the winter.

THE POSITION IN RUSSIA.

BOLSHEVIK ATTACKS HELD UP.

The War Office issues the following:—

South-Russian Front.—The latest report from General Denikin is dated November 7th. According to this, the operations of the Caucasus Army, under General Wrangel, on the east bank of the Volga, have been entirely successful, and the whole area between Tsarev and Rakhinka, opposite Dubovka, has been cleared of the Bolsheviks. On the right bank, the enemy's attempt to push westwards from Cherni Yar has been defeated, with heavy loss, and the Reds have been forced back across the river to Batsavka. The Don Army's right still holds the line of the Don, Khoper, and Buzuluk Rivers. Large numbers of prisoners, including officers, and material of all kinds, are reported to have been captured on this front, particularly in the area north of Liski, where the Cossack attack was completely successful.

After heavy fighting, the Bolshevik cavalry drive westwards from Voronej has been held up by General Shkuro, ten miles east of Kastornoe Junction. On the volunteer front, after heavy and continued pressure by the enemy, the volunteers have been forced back to a line at an average distance of thirty to forty miles north of the Voronej-Kersk-Lgov Railway.

Denikin's progress west of Syevsk continues partly owing to the fact that the attention of the Bolsheviks is being distracted by a rising in their rear about Bryensk, but further to the west counter-attacks and attacks have forced the Volunteers to retire from Chernigov to the south bank of the Desna. The operations against Petliura are continuing. The Bolsheviks are reported to be sending troops to Petliura's assistance.

BRITISH POLICY IN THE NORTH CAUCASUS.

Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy, in the House of Commons yesterday, asked the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether his attention had been called to the protest made by the Parliament of the North Caucasian Republic to the Allied representative, Colonel Haskel, against the invasion of their territory by the so-called Volunteer Army of General Denikin, and to the charges of murder, violation of women, and the defiling of mosques which had been brought against these Volunteer troops.

Mr. Harmsworth, in reply, said that the attention of His Majesty's Government had been drawn, if not to this particular protest, at least to many others of a similar nature. He must add that they had received quite as many in the contrary sense, and intrigues of the Bolsheviks, Turks, and Germans, and alleging interference with General Denikin's communications on the part of some of the inhabitants of these regions. With the concurrence of General Denikin, a British officer had been sent to the territory of the North Caucasian Republic—the independence of which was not recognised either by the British Government or the Peace Conference—with the view to arranging a settlement.

Colonel Wedgwood asked the Secretary for War whether he was aware of the threats made by the British Military Mission with General Denikin to the insurgents against Denikin in the North Caucasus, that unless they submitted British tanks and munitions would be used against them; was this suppression of non-Russian and non-Bolshevik races part of the War Office policy in Russia, and did it apply also to the Kuban Cossacks, and to Georgia.

Mr. Churchill—The answer is in the negative. Colonel Wedgwood will see shortly, was the policy of the Government towards the North Caucasian States, and whether that policy was regulated by the War Office or by the Foreign Office.

Mr. Churchill—We have a representative in the North Caucasus, as hon. members of this House, Mr. MacKinder, going out as High Commissioner, to cover affairs both in the Denikin area and the North Caucasian States. The policy of the British Government may be summed up in trying to make sure that there is no collision that can possibly be avoided by our good offices.

Mr. George Lambert—What are the powers of the High Commissioner?

Mr. Churchill—That does not arise out of this question.

Captain Wedgwood-Benn—Will the right hon. gentleman give particulars of how many wars we are supplying munitions for?

Mr. John Jones—Seeing that all parts of the House are equally interested in the foreign policy of the Government, would it not be well that a Joint-Commission should go to Russia, and not an individual supporter of the Government?

Mr. Churchill—The question of the appointment of a High Commissioner to look after the interests and British policy in a particular part of the world is a matter which lies with the Executive Government, so long as that Executive Government retains the confidence of the House of Commons.

Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy asked whether the policy of preventing collisions between these nationalities applied to the Ukraine, and were we using our good offices there.

Mr. Churchill—I was speaking of the North Caucasus, to which we hope to go when the Turks were driven out, and where, consequently, we acquired certain responsibilities which we are endeavouring to discharge.

POSITION OF PRISONERS IN RUSSIA.

Mr. Harmsworth, in reply to Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy in the House of Commons yesterday, said that there had been no declaration of war by His Majesty against the Russian Soviet Government. It would be difficult to define the position, in international law, of soldiers, sailors, and airmen, who had been captured by the Soviet forces; but, as far as he knew, they were considered by the Soviet Government as prisoners of war.

THE MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT.

A DEPARTMENT FOR IRELAND.

It is officially announced that an Irish branch of the Ministry of Transport has now been established, under the control of Mr. H. G. Burgess, whose official title is Director-General of Transport, Ireland.

Mr. Burgess has had forty years' service with the London and North-Western Railway, and for half of that period has been general manager for Ireland. For 20 years he was an elected member of the Dublin Port and Docks Board, and during the war held the position of Director of Irish Transportation. Mr. Burgess also served for many years as a Commissioner for Carlingford Lough, and as a member of the Dublin Local Marine Board.

The headquarters of the department is at 19 Westmoreland street, Dublin.

MAJOR F. M. CARPENDALE.

Major Frederic Maxwell Carpendale, 42nd Deoli Regiment, Indian Army, had the honour of being received by His Majesty the King on November 6th, and was invested with the Insignia of Companion of the Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire, prior to his leaving for Mesopotamia.

END OF THE AMERICAN COAL STRIKE.

COURT ORDER OBEYED.

TERMS OF RESCINDING ORDER.

ATTITUDE OF MR. GOMPERS.

Reuter's Indianapolis Correspondent, in a message dated Tuesday, says:—The General Committee of Miners decided, at ten minutes past four this morning, to call off the soft coal strike, thus complying with the Court Order, after seventeen hours' deliberation. The rescinding order, which is terse, is signed by Mr. Lewis, the President, and Mr. Green, Secretary and Treasurer, of the Union. It says:—

"In obedience to the mandate of the United States Court, the Order of October 15th, directing the cessation of operations in the bituminous coalfields, is withdrawn and cancelled."

When the miners' conference adjourned in the early morning, to meet again in the afternoon, Mr. Lewis made the following statement to the newspaper men:—"We will comply with the mandate of the Court. We do it under protest. We are Americans, and we cannot fight our Government. That is all."

NEGOTIATIONS POSSIBLE.

The recall of the strike order opens the way to an immediate resumption of negotiations between the miners and the owners, as the latter had announced that they were ready to consider the new wage agreement as soon as the strike order was withdrawn. Whether the miners will obey the order rescinding the strike is problematical. It is reported that in some districts the resumption will be general, while in others it will only be partial, and in some the return will be very slow.

The special Government counsel declares that a failure between the miners and owners to reach an agreement will probably be followed by the appointment of a Government arbitrator. It is stated that as the mine-owners are in several instances under contracts to furnish coal to the Government, they may thus be brought under the provisions of the war legislation which the Government invoked against the miners.

Judge Anderson, of the Federal Court, has approved the order issued by the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers, calling off the strike.

A Reuter telegram dated Washington, Tuesday, says—After a meeting at the White House this morning, Mr. Wilson, Secretary of Labour, announced that he would immediately call the miners and the employers together to negotiate on a wage agreement. It was stated at the White House that President Wilson intended to take similar action.

MR. GOMPERS AND THE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Gompers, at the dinner of delegates of the International Federation of Trade Unions on Monday night, said that he did not believe that a true understanding of the coal strike had reached the President, owing to his illness. He added that whenever an attempt was made by the employés, as employers, or by the Government, as a Government, to depart from the fundamental principles of freedom and democracy, it was not only the right, but the duty, of labouring men and women to stand up and protest, regardless of the consequences. He said that American Labour was in accord with that declaration when it knew that the Government was following the course of justice, freedom, and human development. But after it fails to conform with these principles, we have no other alternative, he declared, but to assert that justice must prevail against any temporary administration of the affairs of our country. We are tied to no Administration, but we are free men, and propose to exercise that freedom in our judgment.

The delegates attending the dinner pledged themselves to support the striking miners.

GENERAL SEELY ABOUT TO RESIGN.

REPORTED DIFFERENCES WITH WAR CABINET

ON POSITION OF AIR FORCES

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. Billing asked the Leader of the House whether the Government had received the resignation of the Deputy Air Minister; whether he had given his reasons for resigning; and could he state what those reasons were.

Mr. Bonar Law—I would rather not make any statement to the House on this subject. It is possible that the hon. member's information is right. If that is so, I would rather the statement was made by the Under-Secretary for Air, himself.

The Press Association understands that General Seely's impending resignation is due to his disagreement with the plans now under consideration for the re-organisation of the War Office and the Air Ministry.

The Central News Lobby Correspondent says—There have been rumours for some days of the impending resignation of General Seely from the Under-Secretaryship of the Air Ministry and the Vice-Presidency of the Army Council, but they were largely discredited till the dramatic announcement was made by Mr. Bonar Law at question time yesterday. The great majority of members were undoubtedly taken by surprise. Speculation was very free as to the causes which have prompted General Seely's decision. The most persistent rumour ascribed it to a clash of views with Mr. Churchill over whom General Seely makes his statement to the House it will probably be found that the relations between him and his chief have been altogether amicable. Those who are in closest touch with him declare that General Seely's motives are founded on larger questions of policy connected with the development of the Air Force, and particularly with regard to civil aviation. The recent drastic curtailment of expenditure by the War Cabinet has made it impossible for General Seely to carry out his schemes for the development and re-organisation of the Air Forces, civil and military, of the country, and, as he regards them as vital to the safety and prosperity of the nation, he has resigned as a protest against what he regards as a policy of parsimony to the Service which requires special care and encouragement.

PRESIDENT POINCARE'S VISIT.

Speaking at the Guildhall, London, yesterday, President Poincaré said that there was something new between Great Britain and France stronger and deeper than before. In peace they were already friends, in war they became Allies, and their welcome that day was a renewed pledge of fraternity. He was convinced that the peace desired by all would more closely every day the bonds which attached her to the hearts of the British people.

At a luncheon the President said that the two nations had saved Justice, and must now keep her alive.

Addressing the French colony subsequently, the President said that they had shown the way to their compatriots by revealing the value of the Franco-British Entente. Let them resume in peace their beneficent mission, and continue to make France loved in England.

Responding to the London County Council's addresses, he advocated closer union between Paris and London, more frequent meetings and exchange of ideas, and said the union of two great peoples which had done much for the security of the world could do no less in the future for the preservation of peace.

The President and Madame Poincaré brought their London engagements to a conclusion last night with the banquet to the King and Queen at the French Embassy. No speeches were delivered on this occasion.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

Messrs. Adamson, Brace, Vernon, Hartsharne, and other miner members had an interview with

ARMISTICE DAY IN DUBLIN.

Morgan, Jas. Martin, and H. Watson. At the conclusion, Mr.—W. Hopkins, who presided at the organ at both Services, played Chopin's "Funeral March." The Service in Christ Church Cathedral was also largely attended, the clergymen taking part being the Very Rev. the Dean, Rev. Canon Hemphill, and Rev. Canon Hayes. The psalms were the 24th and 46th, and the anthem was, "The Righteous Perisheth." (Handel) When the bells of the Cathedral announced the eleventh hour there was a pause for two minutes, during which there was silent prayer, and at the close of the Service the National Anthem was sung by the choir and congregation. In other parishes connected with the Church of Ireland there were similar Services, all of a devotional character. The Service in St. Stephen's Green Methodist Church for remembrance of those who died in the war was conducted by Rev. James Grubb, and was largely attended.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS IN IRELAND.

To give effect to the wishes of His Majesty, the bugles of the Officers' Training Corps connected with the Royal College of Surgeons sounded the "Last Post" just on the stroke of 11 o'clock, the doors were all closed, and all the students stood at attention. At two minutes past the hour the flag of the College was lowered to half-mast.

THE LAW COURTS.

At the Four Courts the two minutes' silence was strictly observed. The judges were in attendance a few minutes before 11 o'clock, and at the appointed time their lordships, the barristers, and all others in the several courts stood up for the appointed time. In the Court of Appeal the Lord Chancellor, addressing Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, who, with a large number of King's Counsel, was seated in front, said that as this was the anniversary of Armistice Day, they, in compliance with the expressed desire of His Majesty the King, and in memory of the glorious dead, would suspend the business of the Court, and remain standing in silence for two minutes. This was done, and a similar ceremony was observed in the other courts.

AT THE PORT OF DUBLIN.

Precisely at 11 o'clock all the flags on steamers in the port of Dublin were lowered to the half-mast position. The flags over shipping companies' premises on both the North and South sides of the river were also lowered for a period of two minutes, during which work was suspended. The electric current from the Port and Docks Board power station at the Alexandra Basin was switched off at the hour arranged, and consequently the electric cranes on the water-side were automatically stopped. The two flags on the Harbour Master's flagstaff were lowered, as were those over the railway station, the 100-ton crane, and the shipbuilding premises of the Dublin Dockyard Company, Ltd. Work ceased at the shipyard, and the sounds of hammers on rivet-heads was temporarily still. Engineering works and other industrial concerns at the port likewise observed the mute two minutes. Some of Messrs. Guinness's steam lighters passing along the river at 11 a.m. stopped their engines, and came to a stand-still for a brief period.

ALONG THE COAST.

The anniversary of the signing of the armistice was duly observed in the various towns along the coast. All trains ceased automatically to run at the eleventh hour, and work was suspended at the various railway stations for the time being. The general public observed the occasion by standing in the streets uncovered, and the observance passed off most successfully.

SCENES IN THE CITY.

Some lively scenes were witnessed in some of the thoroughfares immediately following the two minutes' interval, the principal parties engaged in these being students of Trinity College and of the University College, in Earlsfort terrace. Prior to the last minute of silence a body of young men, numbering about one hundred, and described as National University students, emerged from the Grafton street side, and sang "The Soldier's Song." Only the echoes of the refrain could be heard at Trinity College, but no sooner were the flags floated at full mast on that building and on the Bank of Ireland than the students of Trinity at once lustily joined in singing the National Anthem. While they and the assembled crowd were singing, the National University students marched into College Green, and proceeded towards Dame street, marching three or four deep. They turned in by the street leading into St. Andrew street, and thence into Grafton street, and proceeded towards Harcourt street, where they separated, having indulged meanwhile in singing "The Soldier's Song" and other airs, mingled with shouts of "Up de Valera."

Shortly afterwards a body of Trinity College students formed up in College Green, and, marching four deep, and singing the National Anthem and other patriotic airs, went up Grafton street. Much cheering was also indulged in, and the cheers were joined in by bystanders on the side-walks. A halt was made at the York street entrance to the College of Surgeons, in St. Stephen's Green, and the number of processionists was augmented by students from this building. At least some three or four hundred took part in the march. On arriving outside St. Stephen's Green Methodist Church a halt was made, and the students, with bared heads and facing the church, sang with great fervour, "God Save the King," following this up by repeated cheers for the King. The students, having been again marshalled, proceeded onwards, and a mounted soldier who passed was greatly astonished at the rousing ovation, which he promptly responded to by giving the recognised salute. The Trinity men, who were followed by a large crowd, marched on into Earlsfort terrace, and lined up on the opposite side of the road facing the National University. Their arrival had been heralded by their lusty cheering, and when they were singing "God Save the King," a great body of students, who had been attending studies in the National University, came running out of the building, and took up a stand in front of it. Cheers and counter cheers were given, and from the University side stones were thrown. The National students swarmed out of the gates of their University, and came almost into touch with the Trinity men, who continued cheering. Sticks were freely waved, but no conflict took place here. The Trinity men then reformed, and marched city-wards, being followed at close quarters by the National students. At the corner of St. Stephen's Green both bodies came into conflict, and fists, stones, and sticks were used, several on both sides receiving injuries. After a few minutes the Trinity students once more organised their ranks, and proceeded towards the Shelbourne Hotel. At this point a halt was made by the National men as if they were going to withdraw, but several of the leaders faced their followers, and followed up the Trinity men in a run. The latter marched on, and proceeded down Grafton street, about the middle of which another conflict took place. There were several fistic encounters, and a free fight, in which sticks and stones were dominant, prevailed. It was not until the Trinity men reached their College and entered the gates that matters assumed a normal state. The incident lasted about forty-five minutes, and was at times of a most exciting character. Happily, the scenes passed off without any serious injuries. The National University students crowded round the Trinity College gates for some time, but were gradually dispersed by a number of policemen who arrived on the scene.

IN THE PROVINCES.

IMPRESSIVE SCENE IN BELFAST.

The armistice silence was observed in an impressive manner in Belfast. All the tramcars were stopped, and in the large industrial concerns, such as the shipyards and spinning factories, the workers stopped for two minutes and stood by their machines. Over 500 men from Messrs. Harland and Wolff's shipyards fell during the war, and a proportionately large number from Messrs. Workman, Clark, and Co.'s yards, and the two minutes' pause of the 35,000 shipyard workers was an impressive tribute to the memory of their fallen comrades. The terrific noise of the hundreds of automatic riveters was stilled, and the vigorous tattoo of hammers and the electric drilling machines was silenced. At two minutes past 11 there were two blasts of a siren, and the ordinary operations were resumed.

At Victoria Barracks, where are stationed the 3rd Battalion of the Royal Irish Rifles and the 1st Battalion of the Norfolk Regiment, the buglers of these regiments fell in on their respective parade grounds and sounded the "Last Post." Instantly all work and drill was suspended, garrison and other guards turned out and presented arms, while all ranks immediately stood to attention and remained so until the last notes of the bugles had faded away. Then, following two minutes of impressive silence, the buglers sounded the "Advance," when the normal activities were resumed.

A Service was held in Belfast Cathedral and in a number of the city churches.

LONDONDERRY.

Just before 11 o'clock four rockets were discharged by the military authorities from the square at Ebrington Barracks, Londonderry. In factory, workshop, office, and public thoroughfare work was then suspended for two minutes. Men and women on the street stood, the former uncovering their heads, and in the majority of instances workers employed in the public thoroughfares stopped for the specified period. In Derry Cathedral, from which the Union Jack floated, a twenty minutes' Service, commencing at 10.45 a.m., was held, and was very largely attended.

CORK.

The anniversary of the armistice was celebrated in Cork by the military at Victoria Barracks with an impressive ceremony, which closed with the Union Jack's being mast-headed and the massed bands playing "Land of Hope and Glory" and "God Save the King." The Comrades of the Great War contented themselves with a period of silence, but the Discharged and Demobilised Soldiers' and Sailors' Federation marched, with their President, the Lord Mayor of Cork, to the National Monument, their band playing the "Dead March." Business was suspended for two minutes in many of the larger houses, and Union Jacks were hung out from several establishments. The municipal flag was at half-mast over the City Hall.

OTHER PLACES.

In Limerick a special Service was held in St. Mary's Cathedral, at which the Lesson was read by General Coffin, V.C. There was a very large congregation.

The day was observed in Armagh by the ringing of the bells of St. Patrick's Protestant Cathedral and by the suspension of business for two minutes in several of the leading business establishments.

In Newry there was a cessation of work in all the mills and in the principal manufacturing concerns. At two minutes before 11 o'clock the mill horns were sounded, and at the Town Hall a detachment of the South Wales Borderers, under the command of Lieut. A. P. R. Cannon and Second Lieut. Harlowe, came to the salute as the "Last Post" was sounded and remained at attention till the two minutes had expired. A body of policemen, under Head Constable J. J. Kearney, also participated in the ceremony.

There was no general observance of the day in Clonmel outside the Government and military establishments. Union Jacks were displayed at the barracks and the Borstal Institute. A Requiem High Mass was celebrated at SS. Peter and Paul's Church for the Clonmel soldiers who had died in the war. It is said that Clonmel lost nearly 500 men in the war. A memorial Service was held at St. Mary's Protestant Church.

In Drogheda business was suspended at the Post Office, the Chemical Manure Works, and brewery, and many of the other establishments.

The Post Office, banks, and places of business closed for two minutes in Strabane yesterday.

The Balbriggan magistrates stopped the business of the Court at the Petty Sessions, and promptly at 11 o'clock work was suspended at the hosiery factories.

THE DAY IN GREAT BRITAIN.

IMPRESSIVE SCENES IN LONDON.

The Armistice commemoration was celebrated by solemn and devotional silence throughout London at 11 o'clock yesterday. At the signal of the firing of marooms all traffic stopped. Soldiers and police stood at the salute. Pedestrians remained standing, and the only sound was that of the weeping of women for relatives fallen in the war. At the expiration of the two minutes' tribute to the glorious dead the normal life of London was resumed.

At Buckingham Palace the King and Queen, the French President, and the members of the Diplomatic Corps remained bareheaded for two minutes. Their Majesties sent a beautiful wreath to be placed on the Cenotaph in Whitehall. The French President also sent a wreath.

The inscription on the Prime Minister's wreath laid at the Cenotaph, written by the Premier himself, read as follows:—"A token of gratitude to those who died that we might live more abundantly."

A great crowd outside St. Paul's Cathedral sang the Recessional Hymn. Cabinet Ministers stood bare-headed on the steps of the Home Office for two minutes, the party including the Premier and Mr. Bonar Law. The French President remained before the Whitehall Cenotaph for the hush period. At the Mansion House the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress appeared on the balcony. The "Last Post" was sounded, and a huge crowd sang the Doxology.

The King's appeal was generally observed in Cardiff, where muffled bells were tolled and flags were lowered. The scene at the Coal Exchange Shipping Exchange was impressive. Hundreds of seamen of all nationalities gathered outside the shipping offices to pay their silent tribute. The Salvation Army held a Drumhead Service, a gathering of several thousands singing "O God, our help in ages past."

Impressive scenes were witnessed in Nottingham, notably at the Assize Court. After Mr. Justice Greer had read the King's Message all in court stood reverently with heads bowed, even a prisoner awaiting trial for murder, and who was subsequently sentenced to death, standing thus between two warders.

At Aldershot every soldier stood to attention, and the various guards turned out and presented arms.

CEREMONIES IN AUSTRALIA.

A telegram from Melbourne says:—The various Governments, municipalities, and Churches participated in to-day's Armistice commemoration ceremonies. All normal activities were completely suspended for two minutes at 11 o'clock this morning, the pedestrians halting and uncovering their heads. Hotels and business places were closed, and the "Last Post" was sounded at the principal street corners. Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson the Governor, arrived outside the Parliament House, and a Royal salute was given. His Excellency read His Majesty's message, and the band played, bells were tolled, and flags were half-masted. The Royal salute was again given at three minutes past 11. It was an intensely solemn moment when in deep cathedral-like silence the crowds in the streets listened to the "Last Post." A Thanksgiving Service was held in the Town Hall. Similar Services took place throughout Australasia.

HERMIONE LECTURES.

"THE SOURCES OF INSPIRATION IN THE ARTS."

"The Sources of Inspiration in the Arts" was the subject of the second of the series of Hermione lectures delivered at Alexandra College, Dublin, yesterday afternoon by Mr. Henry Wilson, President of the Arts and Crafts Society, in the presence of a large attendance. The Archbishop of Dublin presided.

Mr. Wilson explained that he proposed to deal with one section of the sources of inspiration of ancient art. He thought that there was something to be said for the new rendering of the origin and inspiration of ancient art. All who felt the appeal of the great purpose of traditional art must often have asked themselves what it was that gave that work a grip upon their souls. Tradition, properly understood, meant background, inspiration, an unbreakable thread stretching down the ages and linking past and present. Little ancient art could be understood without the aid of astronomy. If they looked at any work on ancient art they would see that there was in it, in addition to its beauty and form, some idea which the artist himself had been incompletely aware of. Whether they studied the art of Assyria or Greece there was to be found behind it this idea of astronomy. He could not recall an instance of Greek or Egyptian art which could not be traced back to some definite representation of some phase of the movement of the heavens, or some personification of celestial powers or manifestations. If the idea of astronomy being the basis of many forms of human art was once obtained, any attempt at design would inspire a more noble expression, and would make an artist realise that religion was the basis of all art.

The Chairman, in conveying thanks to the lecturer, expressed the view that in the art of primitive man, nature was its basis. In Egyptian art one found the same sort of realistic touch of living nature. The introduction of astronomical ideas seemed to him to belong rather to conventional art, especially in regard to its religious side. The lecture provided them with many fresh ideas, and they were all deeply grateful to Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson in expressing thanks, explained that when he said that astronomy and astronomical myths were at the basis of all art he was thinking more of all Greek and Egyptian art. The pediment of the Parthenon, for instance, consisted entirely of a series of astronomical ideas. He could quote many other instances from Chinese, Japanese, Greek and mediæval art to illustrate his point.

In his third lecture, to be delivered this afternoon, which promises to be very interesting, Mr. Wilson will deal with Ireland's place in the evolution of the Western arts, and her wonderful past and possible future.

PARLIAMENT.

AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES BILL.

SECOND READING PASSED.

POSITION OF MONTENEGRO.

SEX DISQUALIFICATION BILL.

Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, in moving the second reading of the Agriculture and Fisheries (Councils, etc.) Bill, said that the bill was really a machinery bill, its object being to improve machinery and get the best advice, and stimulate interest in agriculture and rural life generally. The Government wished to improve the organisation of the State for assisting agriculture and re-establishing rural life. As a result of the war, we had realised the great danger of being so entirely dependent on the importation of food, and we now took a broader view of our responsibilities. It was sought to obtain all the advice and assistance possible, both locally and centrally. The bill made two sets of provisions—local administrative and central advisory provisions. It was proposed that in every county there should be set up a standing county agricultural committee, to which every matter of an agricultural character, including the Acts of Parliament relating to agriculture should stand referred. These committees would be on similar lines to the local education committees. A majority of the members would be chosen from the county council, while the Board of Agriculture would nominate at least a third. While the county council might delegate any of its executive powers to the county agricultural committee, the latter might delegate any of its powers to sub-committees, as in the case of the Small Holdings Committees. The Board would also nominate one-third of the members of the sub-committees. As to the national advisory provisions, it was proposed to set up three bodies—an agricultural council each for England and Wales, and an agricultural advisory committee. Each county agricultural committee and county borough would be represented on the council, besides the Agricultural Wages Board and the Board of Agriculture, the last-named representatives to include Labour members, women, and representatives of educational research. The duty of the councils would be to consider all matters of public interest relating to agriculture and other rural industries. The Central Advisory Council would be a much smaller body, consisting of about twelve members for England and Wales. Four members would represent the County Agricultural Committees of England, four would be nominated by the Board of Agriculture, two nominated by the Wages Board, and two would be chosen for Wales. This body would meet about four times a year, or oftener, and would be a statutory advisory committee to the President of the Board of Agriculture, without executive power. It was hoped that something might be done to stimulate social life in villages and re-awaken country life. With regard to the fisheries section, it appeared as if the fisheries industry would prefer to be excluded from the present bill, and to be dealt with in a subsequent measure. He hoped to meet representatives of the industry within the next few days on the matter.

MR. GEORGE LAMBERT.

Mr. George Lambert said he hoped the bill would not mean too much meddling with agriculture on the part of the Government. The question of the Government's policy towards agriculture was of more importance than any question of machinery. The farmer wanted to know what price he would obtain for his produce, and that was the gist of the whole matter. He hoped that the later stages of the bill would not be taken until the whole agricultural policy of the Government had been announced.

Colonel Fitzroy warmly welcomed the bill, which he said he considered very much overdue. He accepted it as a preliminary to the agricultural policy which the Government would announce later.

Mr. Irving asked for a withdrawal of the fisheries clauses. He said that our fisheries industry should be developed under a separate department.

Colonel Wheeler, Major Lane Fox, Colonel Weigall, Mr. Wignall, Commander Kenworthy, and Sir Thomas Esmonde spoke on the bill.

Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, having replied on the points raised, the bill was read a second time.

MONTENEGRO.

On the motion for the adjournment,

Mr. Ronald McNeill called attention to the situation in Montenegro, and to the refusal of the Foreign Office to publish Count de Salis's report.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth denied that there had been any undue reticence on the part of the Foreign Office in regard to Montenegro. The real difficulty was that affairs on the eastern shore of the Adriatic were still unsettled, and they could not settle the question of Montenegro without any regard to those affairs. Count de Salis's report was prepared for the guidance of the Government, and in it he spoke with the completest freedom on every aspect of the question. The report could not be published without causing the greatest trouble. The Government had no intention of slighting Montenegro in any way. They very much deprecated any discussion of the matter, because they had recently received a communication from their principal representative at the Peace Conference to the effect that the situation had reached a more satisfactory stage, and that he looked for a solution on lines that would be acceptable to the Montenegrin people.

THE CASE OF MISS DORA KOSTICH.

Mr. Shortt, in reply to Mr. Robert Young, said that there had been no deportation in the case of the Serbian lady, Miss Dora Kostich. On her arrival here she said that her object was to marry an English soldier, and that she was proceeding to his mother's address, and she was allowed to land on the condition that within a month she produced evidence that the marriage had taken place. After the month had expired, without the production of this evidence, she was allowed to remain, on showing that she had obtained work, and was maintaining herself in respectable surroundings. There was no question of Miss Kostich's good faith, but it was important to take precautions against foreign women landing in this country on the pretext that they were going to marry British soldiers.

Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy asked whether it was the policy of the Government to subject friendly Allied women to this treatment, and what right had we to keep out of this country Serbian or other women if they were respectable.

Mr. Shortt said that we had a right to control immigration to this country.

Mr. John Jones—Why not control the Shah of Persia and his twenty wives? Why cannot I get an answer? There are twenty ladies accompanying the Shah of Persia, and we all know what they are doing here. (Laughter.)

There was no reply.

THE PRICE OF WHEAT.

Mr. Roberts stated, in reply to Mr. Lambert, that the British Government bought wheat in the United States and in Canada from the agents of the Government of the exporting country at prices covering delivery at the seaboard. The prices paid in the United States were based on the guarantee in respect of the 1919 crop given by the United States Government, and, although it was not possible to state precisely the sum which the individual producer received, it was believed that it averaged for the whole country $2 per bushel, which, at the rate of exchange prevailing when the guarantee was given, was equivalent to 67s. 2d. per 340lb. The Canadian Government had guaranteed to its farmers a minimum price for the 1919 crop, and it was understood that the present seaboard prices secured for Canadian producers an average return approximately equal to that received by American producers. The British Government had guaranteed for the 1919 home crop a minimum averaging 71s. 11d. for 480lb., while the average price to-day as published in the London Gazette, was 73s. 1d.

THE WAR LOAN ISSUES.

Mr. Baldwin, replying to Mr. Chadwick, who asked whether the Chancellor of the Exchequer had considered, or was proposing to consider, the consolidation of the existing War Loan issues, said that his right hon. friend did not think consolidation was at the present time either practicable or desirable. He had no information as to whether or not France was contemplating such a policy.

THE FRENCH LOTTERY LOAN.

Mr. Baldwin informed Mr. Chadwick that the Chancellor of the Exchequer believed that the scheme for a French lottery loan had not yet been approved by the Government. The scheme suggested was for an issue in 500 franc bonds, repayable without interest, by drawings spread over twenty years. So far as the Chancellor knew, no Great Power had had a State lottery loan in recent years, but he believed that proposals for such a loan had been made in Germany.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Lord Chancellor in the House of Lords yesterday introduced a bill to amend the law relating to county courts, which was read a first time.

The Commons' amendment to the Sex Disqualification Removal Bill were considered.

The Lord Chancellor said that the Commons had inserted an amendment, the object of which was to enable peeresses in their own right to sit and take part in the deliberations of the House of Lords. He was quite uncertain as to the exact effect of that amendment as framed. Peeresses must be entitled to receive a writ of summons before they could sit in that House, and if the House decided that peeresses should receive a writ of summons, it would be necessary to put that clearly in the bill. He had prepared an amendment, which it would only be necessary to consider if, on the merits, that House decided that peeresses should become eligible for membership of that House. The Government would leave that question open to the House. For himself, he moved that the House do disagree with the amendment.

Viscount Finlay said he thought that it was inopportune to lay down a broad principle until the whole question of the reconstruction of the House of Lords had been initiated by that House itself.

The Lord Chancellor, replying on the debate, said that he accepted the assurance of the Government that they intended to introduce measures for the reform of that House in the present Parliament.

The motion to disagree was carried without a division.

Other Commons' amendments were agreed to.

The House rose at 6.10.

MASONIC ORPHAN BOYS' SCHOOL.

The half-yearly meeting of the Board of Governors of the Masonic Orphan Boys' School was held yesterday at the schoolhouse, Clonskeagh, when the report of the scrutineers of the ballot for the admission of ten pupils from the following list of candidates was read:—Cyril M. Dell, John W. Beresford, Joseph M. Boyd, Gordon D. Campbell, John D. R. Corry, James H. Cross, Alfred Crowe, Henry W. Farmer, Robert G. Ferris, Thomas D. Hall, Claude Hennessey, Percy T. Howard, Thomas M. Hughes, William R. McDowell, Hugh C. McLernon, Charles A. Pearn, Charles C. Pollard, William Refausee, Herbert Smyth, John G. F. Story, Marcus F. Trench, Richard C. Tyner, Charles K. Veal, William H. N. Walsh.

It was unanimously resolved that the ten candidates who obtained the highest number of votes be elected. Accordingly—William R. McDowell (6,475), Charles C. Pollard (6,330), Claude Hennessey (6,115), John D. R. Corry (5,978), Hugh C. McLernon (5,625), William Refausee (4,168), Charles Veal (4,090), Alfred Crowe (3,894), Herbert Smyth (3,383), James H. Cross (2,268), were declared duly elected pupils of the school.

THE PRICE OF SOAP.

Major Barnes having asked the President of the Board of Trade whether, in view of the great increase in the price of soap since the armistice, and that the fact that recent purchases of soap manufacturing concerns brought the manufacture of soap in this country almost entirely under one control—that of Messrs. Lever, Limited—he would appoint a Committee to inquire into the exercise of that control, and report as to the desirability of the State's taking any action towards the regulation of the price of this essential commodity.

Mr. Bridgeman writes in reply that a subcommittee of the Central Committee has already been established under the "Profiteering" Act, and is at present engaged in investigating and inquiring into the manufacture of soap.

Cardinal von Hartmann died on Monday night, says a Reuter's Cologne telegram.

The earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the week ending November 7 amounted to $3,821,000, an increase of $384,000, as compared with the corresponding week of last year.

London. N.4.

Sirs, Phosferine has done my nerves more good than all other medicines put together after the terrible nerve strain that my nerves have had during the last 3 years.

Arthur J. T. White.

MR. A. J. T. WHITE
writes:

"Phosferine has done my nerves more good than all other medicines put together after the terrible nerve strain that my nerves have had during the last 3 years. The results I am still deriving from Phosferine are wonderful, and I cannot express my gratitude enough for the benefit. My friends who have tried Phosferine are very thankful to me for recommending such a wonderful remedy as Phosferine."

1, Charteris Road, Finsbury Park,
London, N.4.

This recent sufferer from Nerve strain declares it was Phosferine alone which enabled him to outlast the exceptionally exhausting tax on his nerves during the last few years.——Phosferine revitalised his exhausted nerve centres and supplied them with the extra nerve force to uphold his system throughout the most severe strain.

DURBAR AT SIMLA.

VICEROY AND THE RULERS OF INDIA.

CHAMBER OF RULING PRINCES.

A Simla telegram, dated November 3, states:—The Viceroy, opening the conference of the ruling princes and chiefs to-day, spoke of the advantage of such a gathering, which afforded an opportunity to renew old friendships and to exchange ideas with the princes who shared the burden of ruling India. He welcomed the Maharajah of Bikanir, and conveyed His Majesty's thanks to the princes and chiefs for the splendid part they had played in winning the war, and for their unanimity in placing their resources at the disposal of the Government in the Afghan war, and he particularly acknowledged the prompt and whole-hearted assistance rendered by the Princes of the Punjab in suppressing the recent disorders there. Continuing, Lord Chelmsford said that the British Empire was at peace in Europe and the East, and tranquillity reigned in India, but the difficulties and dangers of peace were less patent than those of war, and accordingly were more difficult to cope with.

The new after-the-war spirit was the greatest danger, he declared, that had ever faced mankind, and the princes and chiefs could lend valuable assistance by guarding their States against a lawless and malicious spirit, and by refusing to tolerate lying stories as to the motives of the British Government. He counselled the rulers to introduce substantial reforms in the States, building the ancient edifice which had stood the test of centuries.

Referring to domestic reforms, the Viceroy announced the Government's intention to create a permanent Chamber of Princes. Touching on the question of full powers in internal administration, the Viceroy thought it advisable to base a distinction on the salute, and said it was of the highest importance that the question of admission to the Chamber should be dealt with on broad and generous lines, the deciding factor being the status of the particular State, not the personal qualifications of the Ruler for the time being. The Viceroy said that he entirely agreed as to the importance of maintaining the status quo. Feudatory relations, and the whole question of the salute needed investigation, which he was prepared to recommend to the Secretary of State for submission to His Majesty's Government. The Viceroy said that the rulers qualified for admission to the Chamber would be called Ruling Princes, and the rulers of lesser States Ruling Chiefs. Referring to the function of the Chamber and its rules of business, Lord Chelmsford said that attendance and voting would be voluntary, the Chamber being a consulting and not an executive body. The resolutions passed would inevitably exercise an influence on the relations of the Government with the Durbars, which did not participate in the deliberations of the Chamber, and the interests of absent rulers would be sufficiently safeguarded. Direct transactions in business between the Government of India and the States would not be prejudiced by the institution of the Chamber, each State maintaining the right to direct communication with the Government. The Chamber should not discuss the internal affairs of any State of an individual ruler.

Regarding the codification of political practice, the Viceroy stated that the Durbars had been invited to report on the failure of the British Government to fulfil treaties and engagements, and eighteen States had intimated that they had no complaint to make. In the matter of extra territorial jurisdiction, telegraph construction, limitation of armaments, coinage currency, and opium, the policy of the Imperial Government in relation to the States had changed, but there had been no deliberate wish to curtail the powers of the princes and chiefs. The Government of India had acceded to the request of the Durbars to have a voice in the formulation of political practice, while the reservation that, as the paramount power, it retained the right of ultimate decision regarding the principles to be adopted, and the election of their applications.

The Viceroy then announced the intention of the Government to adopt the proposal for the appointment of a Standing Committee which would continue the work of the Permanent Committee engaged on the codification of political practice, the initiative being restricted absolutely to matter of common concern to the States. The Government of India, Lord Chelmsford concluded, was unable to accept last year's recommendation about an arbitration court, on the stipulation that the Viceroy should entertain favourably the request for an arbitration court, as it was desirable that he should retain his discretion in the matter.

The Maharajah of Gwalior moved a resolution congratulating the Government on the conclusion of peace.

The Maharajah of Bikanir, seconding, said that the war had brought home the real identity of interest between the British Government and the Indian princes.

PROROGATION OF CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

An Ottawa telegram, dated November 10, states:—The Duke of Devonshire prorogued Parliament this afternoon. In his Speech from the Throne he referred to the ratification of the Treaty of Peace, and the distinguished position accorded to Canada by the Conference at Paris. Alluding to the Prince of Wales, the Governor-General said:—"The visit of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to Canada has been a source of deep and widespread satisfaction. The universal welcome which was extended to him is evidence of the devotion of the Canadian people to the Throne and British institutions. This welcome, so whole-hearted in character, is an undoubted tribute to the high personal character and qualities of His Royal Highness, who, in peace, as in war, has shown his earnest desire to promote the welfare of the people of this Dominion."

ENTHRONEMENT OF BISHOP OF MEATH.

ADDRESS BY DR. PLUNKET.

AN ANSWER TO THE WORLD'S QUERY.

(FROM OUR REPORTER.)

TRIM, TUESDAY.

The Most Rev. Benjamin John Plunket, D.D., who was elected to the Bishopric of Meath in succession to the late Most Rev. J. B. Keene, D.D., was enthroned as bishop of the diocese in St. Patrick's Church, Trim, this morning.

There was an exceptionally large congregation present, including clergy representing the various churches in the Diocese of Meath, and some in the Diocese of Tuam, of which Dr. Plunket was previously in charge.

The Service commenced with the singing of the Hundredth Psalm, during which the clergy, having robed in the Rectory, proceeded to their places in the Chancel. They included the Archdeacon of Meath, the Dean of Clonmacnoise; the Revs. L. Wynne, R. S. Craig, H. W. Oswald, W. F. Legge, H. Darling, G. E. Patton, F. Leathley, F. W. Wood, G. H. Patton, R. F. Shirley, L. Coulter, O. W. Walsh, S. Radcliff, J. Day, C. Rennison, H. V. White, C. E. Thompson, B. S. Radcliffe, R. Seymour, D.D.; G. E. Fry, H. E. Whyte, F. W. Clinton, H. McClinghan, H. Hughes, F. W. Knight, W. Coates Harvey, LL.D.; F. T. Caldwell, T. R. Brunskill, W. Devlin, C. H. W. Hammick, R. F. L. Clifford, H. Berry, L. A. Handy, T. Anderson, F. Bonynge, J. H. Carson, F. J. S. Mouritz, F. J. A. Beere, H. C. Beere, E. Goff, C. J. K. Burnell, and J. Jackson.

The Archdeacon of Meath, having taken his place at the North side of the Holy Table, the bishop kneeling at the south side, the opening prayers were recited, the congregation standing, the Diocesan Registrar, the Rev. Dr. Seymour, read and presented to the Archdeacon the Archbishops' mandate for the enthronement. Then the bishop, going forward in front of the Holy Table, made the customary declaration, and was afterwards conducted to the Episcopal Chair by the Archdeacon, who, placing him therein, and holding him by the hand, inducted, installed, and enthroned him into the real, actual, and corporal possession of the Bishopric of Meath, and of all rights, jurisdictions, and prorogations to the office pertaining.

The Archdeacon added his blessing, and proceeded to his place, while silence was kept for silent prayer.

The Service of Morning Prayer followed, the special Psalms being xx. (Exaudiat te Dominus) and cxxi. (Levavi oculos). The Rev. R. S. Craig read the first lesson, Isaiah vi., 1 to 8; and the Dean of Clonmacnoise read the second lesson, Ephesians iv., 1 to 13. After the third collect the hymn, "For Christ to learn, for Christ to teach" was sung, and the bishop delivered an address.

BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

The Bishop spoke on the subject of witness from the texts Acts 1, 8 and 9, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight." To be a witness of a person, he meant, he said, to say—"I know something about him, and I can tell you you what I know. I can bear testimony to his character. I am sure of it all because I saw it myself." Simple as such language was they had in it the very foundation on which Christian theology and Christian life were based. The last words of the Master, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me" were confirmed by the last words of St. John "We have beheld, and we bear witness that the Father hath send the Son to be the Saviour of the world." Yes, the servants of Christ bore witness to Him, and the result was a Christian Church. The answer to the question how they could bear witness to Christ was two-fold: they could bear witness by the voice and they could bear witness by the life. There were times that came to all of them when a word might be spoken on behalf of their Christian faith. He was not thinking of the pulpit or the platform, but of the home, the club, the office, the market, the railway carriage or whenever men met or talked together. There was the opportunity for the faithful and the true witness—the man of courage and conviction. But there was a form of witnessing deeper and more convincing than that of the mouth and the life. There was the life and the character. Let them ask themselves who were the people that most inspire them, strengthened their faith and brought them close to Jesus Christ? It was not always those who spoke much, but those whose very life was a witness to the spirit of Christ within them. And the witness that they gave was so plainly honest that one found oneself saying, "Yes, it must be true." That was the message that he gave to himself and them that day. Was there anything in their lives and in their characters which told in favour of the Christian faith, and made it easier for men around them to believe in Christ and to turn Him and serve Him better? With what special force the words "We are His witnesses" came home to them that day! That was no ordinary day, and that was no ordinary Service. Twelve months ago that day the armistice that stayed the war was signed. Justice triumphed and the glorious victory was won for the cause of truth and righteousness. It was meet then that on that anniversary they should tune their hearts to the note of thankfulness and make acknowledgment of what they owed to God. Yes, and further they called to mind with pride and gratitude the sacrifice of life made on their behalf by their fellow-men. They were in their thoughts and in their prayers—those noble-hearted heroes, who, in absolute self-forgetfulness, laid down their lives to save not Ireland or England alone, but the whole world from ruin. Army and Godless. They were faithful men unto death, in the cause of Him who said—"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." But while thus joining with all their fellow citizens of their great Empire in commemorating that armistice day their thoughts that morning were of necessity centred around their own little corner of that Empire, and their own little branch of the Christian Church. That day a new chapter was being opened in that ancient diocese of Meath, and they met together—Bishop, clergy, and people—in that house of God to thank Him for His goodness in the past, and to evoke his blessing on the future. To him (the Bishop) that Service was one of peculiar solemnity and sacredness. He realised keenly the weight of responsibility of the new work to which God had called him. He was fully conscious how greatly he stood in need of His Grace and guidance, but he confessed that uppermost in his heart that day there was the remembrance of the past. He had been called, as they knew, to succeed his father in that Bishopric. It was not easy for a son to take his father's place, especially when the son had had such a father as he had had. Those of them who remembered his father—his saintliness, his humility, his gentleness of heart—would readily understand how much it all meant to him to have so high a standard constantly before his mind. And, further, there filled his memory another picture—and that good to look upon—the picture of their late beloved Bishop, he, who, for the last 22 years, shepherded with such devotion the flock of Christ in the diocese. It was hard to follow such a man. Their late Bishop was a brilliant scholar, a man of exceptionally wide knowledge, but, best of all, in purity, in self-effacement, in warm affection, he had the heart of a little child. His very face seemed to reflect the presence of God, and looking at him they were forced to say: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see—even while here on earth—God." He could only pray that the memory of all the good and holy men that had filled that bishopric before him might be a constant inspiration in his own life and work. "Ye are My witnesses." If, as individuals, this was their obligation, how much more did it rest upon them in their corporate capacity as a Church? It was the Church's mission to interpret Christ to the world, to re-present Him before the eyes of men. In these days of social upheaval, when the foundations of their civilisation were being shaken, and all seemed in a state of change and uncertainty, the world was in sore need of guidance and control. So far the Church of Christ made but little appeal. The world seemed to have so little use for her. Individually she might exert some influence here and there, but as an organised society she was left out of the councils of the nations. And why should this be? Because, too often, alas! as a witness her evidence was unconvincing, sometimes even contradictory. In primitive days her message found its force in its simplicity and the consistency of the lives of those who delivered it, and it was then that she drew the whole world to her feet. And if ever again the Church won for Christ the allegiance of men, it would be as she returned to her doctrines, and her members gave witness by their holy lives to the power of the Gospel. Here lay the great task of the Church to-day—to answer in terms of life and character and service the world's query as to the reality and efficiency of their faith. A few saints, a few living witnesses were a better answer to a careless, sceptical world than any number of sermons or works on theology. And what was true of the Church as a whole was true also of their little branch—that dear old Church of Ireland. Her duty was to bear witness for Jesus Christ, and to occupy her time with any other kind of witnessing was to greatly weaken her evidence. They had, it was true, some very powerful claims to put forward. They could point to their Apostolic origin; the validity of their Episcopacy, their Scriptural liturgy, and their unbroken succession from the days of St. Patrick. Thank God that all these marks of a truly Catholic and National Church were theirs. But let them remember that in themselves all these were only a part, though a very essential part, of the witness that a living Church should bear. For behind them there was the life and there was the character—the evidence of a power, nay, more, of a person, ruling in the hearts of the men and women who composed the Church. And so, as they loved their Church, and longed to see her an ever-increasing blessing in the land, let them re-dedicate their lives to Jesus Christ, and make their manner of living a witness to be seen by all men, that in very truth the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation.

The prayers were read by the Rev. Edward Goff, Rector, and after the hymn, "O brothers, lift your voices," the bishop pronounced the Benediction. The congregation joined in singing the National Anthem, and the service concluded with the recessional hymn, "Pour out Thy Spirit from on high."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE COSMIC RIDDLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Sir Oliver Lodge is quite justified in his warning against hasty generalisations founded on the confirmation or seeming confirmation, of Einstein's speculations, by the results obtained by the recent eclipse expedition. Most of us will remember being puzzled in our school days by the eccentricities of the elusive "zero," which would not obey the laws of number. Years ago I remember seeing an amusing cartoon—I think in Punch—entitled "Both Puzzled." A harassed-looking schoolmaster and his pupil are putting their heads together over a slate, while the pupil says, "But, sir, if wanst nought is nothing, then twice nought must be something, because it's double what wanst nought is." And in later years many of us must have been caught by an ancient algebraical joke, which still crops up from time to time in the papers, when some greenhorn sends it to the editor with the request that "some reader will explain where the fallacy lies." I refer to the equation which seems to prove that 2 = 1. The "fallacy lies" in the fact that one of the factors in the equation was by definition equal to zero, and all that the mysterious equation proved was that $2 \times 0 = 1 \times 0$: twice zero equals once zero.

Now, what "nought" or zero was to our childish brains, "infinity" is to brains of a larger growth. Everyone who has studied mathematics is familiar with the paradox that parallel lines "meet at infinity." The ellipse is a conic section with a finite distance between its foci. The parabola is an ellipse with one focus removed "to infinity"; and in the hyperbola the focus, which had departed "to infinity," has returned from infinity, but from the opposite direction, just as a traveller who leaves London and travels westwards will, after making the circuit of the globe, return to London from the east. We cannot think of a traveller returning to his destination without describing a curve of some sort, whether the said traveller be a human being on the face of the globe or the focus of a conic section.

The fact is that all geometrical figures are merely concepts of the mind, and have no existence outside it. A circle, for example, does not exist in Nature. Euclid's definition thereof cannot be realised in the concrete. It is defined to be "a plane figure surrounded by one line, and such that all straight lines drawn from a certain point within it to the circumference are equal." Now, if the figure "acquires a kink," it is no longer a circle by the definition, and if we proceed to "describe a circle" on blackboard, paper, or elsewhere, what we describe is not a circle, but a more or less imperfect approximation thereto. The circumference is not a "line," for it has breadth as well as length; the centre is not a "point," for it has some magnitude, however small a dot we make; and the radii are not "lines," for even if the compasses were made of a substance which was not perfectly rigid; and so, probably, the distance between their points altered while we drew the figure. So also with all other geometrical figures—they are mental concepts only.

And what about "space"? Space is not an entity, but the absence or negation of entity. Consequently it is absurd to speak of its being "twisted" or "distended." You cannot twist, distort, or distend nothing. That "straight" lines, when produced to infinity, become curves, and return back to their starting point, has long been one of the speculative paradoxes of the mathematician. But it merely amounts to this—that the human mind (in which only the "straight line" exists) when it tries to fathom infinity fails, and finally in despair returns to its starting point. But that our finite minds cannot think infinity or a space which is infinite, does not prove that infinity and infinite space do not exist. "Euclidean straight lines," as Cromwellin remarked, "could not exist in Einstein's space." But do they exist, or did they ever exist, anywhere, except in our own minds?

The human intellect seems to exist to confound itself, to refute its own reasoning, to pull down its own most carefully constructed edifices, like the royal swordsman of the "Odyssey," who undid at night all that she had woven during the day. Professor Einstein has certainly "scored one" in that his predicted value for displacement of stars near the sun has been confirmed by a crucial test of observation. But, with Sir Oliver Lodge, I prefer to wait rather than jump to hasty conclusions. As there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy, so there may be more things in the near neighbourhood of the sun than are yet dreamed of by science. The suggestion of "a kind of refraction" there had occurred to others as well as to Sir Oliver Lodge, as a possibility. There is certainly matter of some sort in the sun's neighbourhood capable of acting upon light, as the coronal streamers in a total eclipse often are seen to extend to quite long distances from the sun's face.—Yours, etc.,

W. F. A. ELLISON.

Armagh Observatory, November 10th, 1919.

THE IRISH HORSE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Captain Ryan's letter on "The Irish Horse" expresses, I think, the views of all practical horse-breeders in Ireland. A great many of us remember a type of Irish horse owned by our forefathers which differed very materially from the type to which we are accustomed to-day. He ploughed, carted, mowed, drove us to church, to the fairs, to Punchestown and other local races, and he was again ready to work after any drive at whatever he was wanted for next day.

Irish people are, no doubt, easily deluded, and they take too much for granted in many things as well as in horse-breeding. I do not think that the Department of Agriculture in Ireland was ever meant to take the Irish farmer's business out of his own hands. It was intended to help them with their business, and it would, no doubt, have done this if Irish farmers had retained their own initiative, and not acted blindly in all matters in which the Department was concerned. The recent inspection of stallions by the Department (under the Horse-breeding Act, 1918) would also do much good if carried out properly, and if all sires which are considered, and are obviously, unsuitable for breeding purposes are eliminated.

Sires of nondescript breeding (and there are a good many of these stallions now in the country sired by a Department horse and out of a nondescript, or pony, mare) may be sound enough, but they do incalculable harm to the horse-breeding industry; and, unless it is proved that the dam of one of these sires was an outstanding good mare of proved breeding qualities, as well as the sire being of the right sort, these half-breds, or mongrels, should not go on the register. If sires of this type of doubtful breeding qualities get on the register, another great injustice will be done to the industry and to the owners of really good sires, because the ordinary farmer will not consider the difference, especially if he gets the mongrel cheaper. This he undoubtedly will—I mean the service cheaper—because the nondescript has probably cost his owner very little money, nothing is spent on his keep, and he can be let cheaper than the good stallion. It remains, therefore, still to be seen whether the new scheme will be a step in the right direction, or if it will only add to our grievances in this very important matter.

Of course, good stallions of the Irish draft type, suitable for the improvement of our horses, are now scare, but a great many people think that the Suffolk Punch could be used with success in this way. It is a great general purpose breed, and has many qualifications to recommend it for the improvement of our present day horses. These horses have soundness, hardiness, good conformation, and are easily reared and quick to mature. They can be yoked at a younger age than the other breeds, and are quite intelligent. The Connemara ponies have suffered, too, by mongrel breeding; there are now few Connemaras, but plenty of nondescripts. Nobody seems to know whether the new Act of Parliament applies to pony-breeding.—Yours, etc.,

"HORSE-DEALER."

THE COST OF FOOD PRODUCTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your issue of the 10th instant "Agricola" asks for cost accounts of the food products referred to in my letter to you of the 7th November. I have kept fairly accurate accounts of outgoings and receipts for the last three years, and for the current year (1919) I append the figures upon which the costs of production were arrived at. Whether my system of accounts would bear the scrutiny of a chartered accountant, I cannot say; farmers will probably be able to judge whether the items fairly represent present conditions.

I know nothing of the methods adopted by the Food Controller in fixing prices. One of his most important duties was to popularise agriculture; how well he succeeded the deposits in the Irish banks bear ample testimony. Like everything else nowadays, the prices of agricultural products are grossly inflated. Some day—the sooner the better—when this world-engulfing wave of unrest has swept by, we may get back to normal conditions and business:—

POULTRY SHOWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your issue of to-day "Poultry Breeder" complains of the action of the Royal Dublin Society in not holding their Winter Show this year. Seeing the extended interest taken in poultry-keeping during the last few years, it is a matter for surprise that no open poultry show has been held in Dublin for six years, since December, 1913, the date of the last Royal Dublin Society Winter Show. If poultry-keepers had any initiative, they would form their own local association, and not be dependent entirely on the Royal Dublin Society for the holding of a show.

Incidentally, such a local association might do much by concerted action in bringing down the excessive prices charged locally for feeding stuffs. In a recent issue a correspondent, Mr. F. J. Usher, stated that the prices of wheat and oats were 17s. and 14s. a cwt., respectively; yet, poultry mixtures, often containing inferior grain, cost up to 25s. a cwt. in the shops, while Indian meal was being advertised up to 35s. a cwt. until the recent Order of the Department fixing the price at 25s.—Yours, etc.,

MR. JOSEPH SIMPSON, I.S.O.

FAREWELL TO THE CUSTOM HOUSE.

At the Custom House, Dublin, on 4th instant, an interesting function took place, the occasion being the retirement from official life of Mr. Joseph Simpson, I.S.O. (a native of the North of Ireland). The staff took the opportunity of presenting him with a small token of their affection and regard, and by conveying to him publicly their high appreciation of his official worth, kindly personality, and genial character. The chair was taken by Mr. A. W. Beatty, and there were with him Major Whewell, Estate Duty Office; Mr. S. E. Minnis, the new Comptroller, and Captain and Mrs. Simpson.

The Chairman read letters of apology for non-attendance from Superintending-Inspector O'Brien and Captain Weir, who at the moment were in the South of Ireland, and then called in turn upon the various speakers.

Members of the various departments paid tributes to the many fine qualities of Mr. Simpson, and referred to the excellent relations which invariably obtained between himself and his staff. Amongst the speakers were—Mr. T. F. Lynch (Companies Registration), Mr. H. Eckersley (Excess Profits and Land Values), Mr. W. Abbott (Income Tax Claims), and Mr. A. Tuohy (Arrears Branch). Major Whewell spoke on behalf of the Estate Duty Office, and Mr. D. Collins on behalf of the Law Department. Miss C. M. Power spoke on behalf of the ladies. The following also spoke:—Mr. S. E. Minnis, Mr. J. Gunning, B.A., Colonel Tamplin, D.S.O., Mr. W. J. O'Donnell, Mr. H. A. V. Thompson, Mr. J. P. MacCormack (on behalf of Second Division Clerks), Mr. D. D. MacAleese (on behalf of Assistant Clerks), and Mr. E. E. Baker.

The Chairman, in feelingly worded, endorsed all the speakers had said, and laid stress on the amicable relations existing between every member of the staff and Mr. Simpson. He then formally presented the souvenir—a gold watch—as a small token of regard and appreciation, and conveyed the accumulated sincere good wishes of the gathering for the long life and happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson.

Mr. Simpson, who was enthusiastically received, was deeply affected by the heartiness and spontaneity of his reception. In eloquent and graceful words, he returned thanks for the souvenir that the staff had so kindly presented to him, and especially for the many agreeable and, as he termed it, flattering things they had said of him. He considered that the last eleven years which he had spent with them had been amongst the happiest years of his official career. His staff had, by their loyal and capable services, made possible the efficient carrying-out of the extraordinarily complex, difficult, and arduous work entailed by the great war; and he, on his part, was only too glad to have that opportunity of thanking them for their hearty co-operation. In this thanks he wished also to include the Estate Duty Office and the Law Department, with which he had often been in consultation. He referred to the comparatively large number of the members of his staff who had served with the Colours in the war, and of the distinctions they had gained. He spoke feelingly of those that had suffered and fallen, and took occasion to pay a grateful tribute to their memory. In conclusion, he said that he would follow the future careers of his late colleagues with the greatest interest and affection, and no one would be more delighted than he to learn, as he felt sure he would, that adequate recognition of their talents and their merits would be extended to them before long. (Loud applause.)

Professor A. V. Salmon, of King's College, died suddenly yesterday morning at his residence in Reading. Since 1905 he had been Professor of French at King's College. Professor Salmon made a personal hobby of poultry-rearing, and was well known among English poultry experts.

THE NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

MEETING OF CONVOCATION.

REGRET FOR DR. KUNO MEYER.

EX-SERVICE MEN AND MATRICULATION.

A meeting of Convocation of the National University of Ireland was held last evening in University Buildings, Earlsfort terrace, Dublin. The Right Hon. M. F. Cox, M.D., presided, and there was an unusually large attendance.

Professor John MacNeill, B.A., moved:—

That this meeting of Convocation of the National University of Ireland, having learned of the death of Professor Kuno Meyer, offers profound condolence to the relatives of the illustrious deceased, and to his colleagues in the University of Berlin, and that a copy of the resolution be notified to Professor Edward Meyer, Berlin University.

In moving the motion, Professor MacNeill, who spoke in Irish, said that the work of Dr. Kuno Meyer in promoting the Irish language study and the study of Irish literature extended over forty years. During that time Kuno Meyer held an eminent position in Celtic studies amongst the many eminent men. A few days before his death he had published an anthology of the earliest Irish poetry. The University would certainly be a sufferer through his loss.

Professor Arthur Clery, in seconding, said that he noticed that in that day's papers, apropos of that resolution, certain political matters were introduced. He had no intention of introducing anything of a political nature, and he asked those present to pass the resolution for one who was at once a scholar and a witness.

Miss Wyse-Power said that it had been stated publicly that the late Dr. Meyer had a contempt for the Irish people, but she would say that when she was in Berlin she heard him lecture on Ireland. She never heard him speak of Ireland or the Irish with anything but with the greatest respect and reverence.

The Chairman said he took it that they would pass the resolution of sympathy on the loss of a great Irish scholar, who was also a great man. The resolution, he added, would be conveyed to Professor Edward Meyer, of Berlin University.

The resolution was passed in silence.

COUNTY COUNCIL AND BOROUGH REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Michael Hayes, B.A., proposed a lengthy resolution relative to County and Borough Councils, which are to elect representatives in the closing weeks of this year to the governing bodies of the constituent colleges of the National University, suggesting that the elections be made subject to the understanding that the persons so elected shall resign office when the new County and Borough Councils in Ireland are elected, and when their new delegates to the General Council of County Councils had been chosen. He said that the County Councils, which would be elected next June, would be entitled to elect twenty-five representatives to the governing bodies, and they would, according to Statute, be able to hold office until 1923. What he sought in the resolution was to get from persons who would be elected next month a promise that when the new County Councils came into being, they would retire, and seek re-election by the new County Councils.

Mr. P. J. Little seconded.

Mr. Cecil Lavery moved a direct negative, contending that the subject that the resolution was concerned with was not properly one for Convocation to concern itself with.

There being no seconder for the amendment, it fell through, and the Chairman declared the original motion carried.

RESEARCH AND EDUCATIONAL WORK.

Mr. P. McGilligan, M.A., proposed a resolution suggesting that the annual meeting of Convocation, with the aid of sub-committees, investigate various matters relating to the University, such as the utilisation of the powers of University and of public bodies acting in connection with it for research and other work in connection with the industries of Ireland; the training and employment of graduates, the provision of extension teaching, academic recognition for special forms of education in the Irish language now available in many Irish-speaking districts, courses of instruction leading to degrees, so as to suit those who have to gain a livelihood during the ordinary academic lecture hours.

Mr. Murray seconded the resolution, which, with some slight amendment, was adopted.

MATRICULATION REGULATIONS.

Mr. H. J. Friel proposed a resolution to the effect that a clause in the matriculation regulations for 1920 should be at once rescinded, as a breach of faith. The clause in question provided that during the war, and for one year after, the Senate might accept students who are, or who have been, members of the combatant forces of the Crown, and have been selected for University instruction by the Government, and count such selection in lieu of a matriculation examination. The effect of the new resolution, he said, would be that certain students would be admitted without any further examination in Irish. The men who were to get such facilities had fought, not for this country, but for a country which was strangling the liberties of the Irish people. There was a National University, and the word "National" meant something. He was for six years, since December, 1913, the date of the last Royal Dublin Society Winter Show. If poultry-keepers had any initiative, they would form their own local association, and not be dependent entirely on the Royal Dublin Society for the holding of a show.

Incidentally, such a local association might do much by concerted action in bringing down the excessive prices charged locally for feeding stuffs. In a recent issue a correspondent, Mr. F. J. PROVINCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

GREYSTONES PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The Rev. W. S. Kirkpatrick, B.A., Presbyterian Minister, Enniscorthy, has accepted the call of the Greystones congregation.

HOUSE SEARCHED IN TIPPERARY.—The house of Patrick Sinnott, blacksmith, Bank place, Tipperary, was searched for firearms by a party of police. The search lasted a considerable time. It is not known if anything of an incriminating nature was discovered.

GUARDIANS' COMPLAINT AGAINST MILITARY AUTHORITIES.—The Bantry Guardians again adjourned their meeting, which was held in the porters' room yesterday, as a protest against the military withholding possession of the Boardroom. The Guardians intend to do any business, and threatened in future to hold their meetings in the open air.

FATAL TIPPERARY SHOOTING ACCIDENT.—A verdict of accidental death was returned at the inquest held yesterday at Grantstown, Tipperary, on the body of a boy named Patrick Doody (11), who died from gunshot wounds on Sunday night. The evidence showed that Mortimer Doody left a gun at the end of Mr. Higgins' house while he went in to tea. During Doody's absence a man named John Shine took up the gun, which accidentally went off, shooting young Crosse through the head.

MEMORIAL TO STEWARTSTOWN SOLDIERS.—A meeting was held in the Minor Hall, Stewartstown, on Monday evening, Viscount Charlemont presiding, for the purpose of further considering the best means of commemorating the memory of the men of the district who made the supreme sacrifice in the war. Mr. John Shelly, Hon. Secretary, handed in a cheque for £50, which he had received from the Earl of Castlestuart. Viscount Charlemont promised a similar amount. Provisional arrangements were made for the erection of a hall.

MAINTENANCE OF INSANE SOLDIERS.—The Clonmel Asylum Committee yesterday discussed a report which dealt with the sending of ten insane ex-soldiers from Belfast War Hospital to the Clonmel Asylum. The Chairman said that it would be serious if the Government dumped these men into institutions. The Clerk said that it was possible that they might have a hundred before Christmas. They were admitted under the Army Act, but if admitted under the old Act as criminal lunatics the Treasury would pay all. The Committee made an order that the men should be admitted at the old rate, and be fully paid for.

For an initial effort the meeting at Maryborough yesterday was a remarkable success; so much so, indeed, that the fixture-gives promise of taking rank as second only to the Irish Cup Meeting. The club have procured a beautiful stretch, some 650 yards long, and, with strong racing hares, the trials proved in every respect the most genuine we have seen in any park in this country for many years past. There was not a fluky course decided during the day, and the three thousand odd spectators enjoyed in ideal weather a grand day's coursing. The arrangements were perfect in every detail, and the club has set an example to older clubs that could be followed with distinct advantage to Irish coursing. The Bracelets was the only stake run out, and it afforded Dysart Beauty an opportunity of showing her pace and her merits as a good all-round greyhound, her victory over the smart Ocean Beauty in the decider being a very meritorious performance.

FINANCIAL NEWS

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

QUIETER MARKETS. COATS AGAIN LOWER. OTHER TEXTILES BETTER. DUNLOP RUBBERS FIRM.

Outside "specialities" the Stock markets were distinctly quieter yesterday, and prices correspondingly presented few fresh features, though values were well maintained considering some realisation pressure in certain directions. The Funds were not much changed. Banks marked time. Breweries, etc., were easy. Marconi Ord. were firm, and Americans weaker. Rails and Trams were idle generally. Dunlop Rubber Ord. advanced further in a much quieter market. Textiles were mostly well supported, especially Spinners, but Coats continue under pressure. Brunner Mond shares advanced sharply. Oils and Tobaccos marked time.

In the Funds, Consols closed ¼ better, War Loan 5 p.c. eased another ⅛, and the 4 p.c. fell ¼. India Stocks fluctuated. The 3½ p.c. rose ¼, and the 5 p.c. fell ¼. Rathmines and Rathgar Township Stock was wanted.

Banks were just steady, but Royals fell ¼ to 12½.

In Breweries, etc., Castlebellingham Ord. fell to 6½ x.d., and Dublin Distillers' Prpf. ¼ to 5¾. Guinness Ord. were idle, but steady, about last price.

In Marconis, the Ord. repeated 130s., but Americans fell 1s. to 32s., and Spanish Trust repeated 14s.

Home Rails were almost idle. Great Northern fell ½ to 83; but the Pref. rose ¼ to 68 and the Debs. ¼ to 76. Great Southern Guaranteed fell ¼ to 69.

In Trams, Dublin United rose ¼ further to 7¾. Among Dunlops, Parent Tyre Deferred were to better demand, and recovered 6d. to 63s. 6d. Dunlop Rubber Ord. on top of the previous day's big advance rose ⅓ more to 10¼.

In Bakery, Johnston Ord. fell ½ to 5⅝; but the Debs. rose ⅛ to 64.

As regards Manufacturing, Brunner Mond rose 2s. 3d. to 45s., Calicos 4½d. to 24s. 9d., and Spinners 1s. 3d. to 85s. 9d., after touching 86s. Coats fell ⅛ further to 8⅜, ⅛, and the Pref. Ord. ⅛ to 48⅛. Lever Bros. "A" Pref. eased 2½d. to 20s. 1½d.

Trading, etc., were idle.

Among other business done, Imperial Tobacco rose 6d. Shells were scarcely altered at 20½. Reckitts fell 3d. to 45s. 9d.

After hours the following prices were current:—Coats Ord., 8⅛; the Preferred-Ord., 48½; Furness Withy, 68s. 3d.; Dunlop Rubber Ord., 10⅜; Marconis, 130s. sellers; and Shells, 20⅝.

WEAK STOCK MARKETS.

DEAR MONEY FEARS CAUSE A WAVE OF DEPRESSION.

TALK OF A 7 PER CENT. BANK RATE.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

A wave of depression overran the Stock Exchange yesterday. Perhaps the solemnity of the celebration of the anniversary of the armistice may have rendered the "House" particularly susceptible to enervating influences, and recent criticism of speculative activity may have created an undercurrent of nervousness. The main causes of prevailing weakness were rumours of a probable 7 p.c. Bank rate on Thursday, with the alternative that if not this week, it will come before the end of the year, and vague reports of serious Labour troubles being imminent. Government Stocks suffered rather severely, Funding and Victory Loans falling to 75 and 81 respectively, and War Loan to 91¼. Foreign Bonds were heavy owing to unfavourable exchange movements, French Loans being weak. Argentine Rails reacted, but Leopoldinas and Brazilian Tractions were supported by the further sharp rise in the parity to 19⅛. Oil Shares and others, which recently have enjoyed speculative activity, relapsed sharply under profit-taking, but Shipping and Insurance Stocks maintained relative firmness. As a rule, markets closed at their worst.

LONDON STOCKS DULL.

SHAKE-OUT ON SPECULATIVE ISSUES.

Business on the Stock Exchange was not very vigorous, and the general appearance of markets was irregular, with a downward tendency predominating. The speculative groups experienced something of a shake-out, and Oil and Industrial counters especially registered a fairly pronounced reaction, realisations being on a fairly substantial scale. The influence of the big flood of new issues were quoted as the main factor in the reactionary tendency. Gilt-edged issues were heavy.

Miscellaneous gilt-edged issues were heavy with the rest of this market on monetary fears, and while there was not a great movement to hand, fails ranging up to ¼ were fairly frequent. The Colonial group was quiet and lagging, but there was no pressure to sell.

Changes—Falls: Consols, ¼ to 51; Funding Loan, ¼ to 75; Victory Bonds, 1 to 81; 3½ p.c. War Loan, ½ to 86¼; 4½ p.c. War Loan, ½ to 94; 5 p.c. War Loan, ⅞ to 91⅛; 4 p.c. War Loan, ½ to 100; 5 p.c. Irish Land, ¼ to 57; India 3 p.c., ½ to 52½; do. 3½ p.c., ¼ to 62½.

FOREIGN BONDS DECLINE.—In the Foreign market French Loans experienced another pronounced relapse owing to the weakness of the Paris exchanges. The Fives gave way a full point to 65¾, and the Fours were also a good fraction lower. Russian Bonds were flabby, but barely lower to quote, though the flash of optimism regarding Russian political possibilities caused by the Premier's speech has not been maintained in the market. Far Eastern Bonds were rather offered, though the volume of selling was not heavy, and quotations showed satisfactory resistance. Argentine and Brazilian Bonds held steady.

Changes—Rises: Greek Fives, 1½ to 63; Peruvian Pref., ½ to 74; Chinese Fives, 1 to 82½; do. 4½ p.c., 1 to 70¼; do. Fives (1912), 1 to 75; French Loan, 1 to 65¾; Japan New Fives, 1 to 83¾.

HOME RAILS RESTRICTED.—In the Home Railway market business was of a restricted and spotty character. The tendency of quotations was against holders. Trunk and Tube Stocks were narrowly dull. Most of the leaders in this group, after moderate fluctuation, finished without change, but South-Western Def. at 24½ was weaker. Undergrounds were moderately realised among Passenger issues. Districts lost ½ at 11½, but Metropolitans recovered a similar setback and finished unchanged.

CANADIANS AND MEXICANS FIRMER.—Canadian Pacifics were firmer at 178, but Grand Trunk junior issues further sagged on the uncertainty of the ultimate yield under terms of the nationalisation sanction. Mexican Rails showed to better advantage. Selling predominated among Argentine Rails, which concluded with scattered falls of ½ to 1. Leopoldinas, in the Brazilian group, appreciated 1 to 43.

Changes—Rises: Canadian Pacific, 1½ to 178; Grand Trunk Guar., ½ to 60½; Mexican 1st Pref., 1 to 40; United Havana, 1 to 88. Falls: Grand Trunk, ½ to 9½; do. 3rd Pref., ½ to 20½; B.A. Great Southern, ½ to 83; B.A. Western, ½ to 86½; Central Argentine, 1 to 66½; Mexican Nat. 1st Pref., 1 to 16.

INDUSTRIALS CHEERFUL.

TEXTILES, INSURANCE, AND SHIPPING EXHIBIT FAIR STRENGTH.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Although sentiment in the Miscellaneous and Industrial Market yesterday was somewhat distracted in common with that in other departments of the "House" by monetary fears, several good features survived, and pressure of realisations in some specialities compared with good support for others. Even if the condition of the American exchange be taken to warrant further uneasiness regarding the Bank rate, the general industrial situation is in many quarters judged to still warrant cheerfulness and confidence, though admittedly quotations are now high in many groups. The rumours of impending labour trouble which were circulating might justify the development of a less sanguine view regarding the outlook, but they were very vague, and not much importance was attached to them. Textile Shares were bought on both London and provincial account, but Coats still met profit-taking, though the close was not at the lowest, and Sewing Cottons reacted abruptly. The prevailing tendency of Insurance Shares was a forward one under lead of North British and Mercantile, and a fair degree of strength was shown by certain Shipping Shares, the higher-priced descriptions being chiefly favoured, especially by Liverpool. Marconis remained flabby, and Steel Shares were limper, Bengal Irons failing back in a pronounced way now that the capital reorganisation news is out. British Oil and Cake were good on the bonus announcement.

MODERATE SET-BACK IN MINES.

ONE OR TWO FAVOURITES RESIST THE GENERAL TENDENCY.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Yesterday a good deal of the cheerfulness went out of the markets, and a very subdued feeling pervaded most sections of the house. Monetary considerations were said to be responsible for the change of sentiment, but there is no doubt that after the uninterrupted advance which many speculative securities have enjoyed for some time past a reaction was only to be expected. In fact, in many quarters a check to the forward movement was welcomed as tending to weed out the weak element, and thus stabilise markets. Mines were no exception to the general rule, and many of the recent favourites were among the sufferers, it being only here and there that any resistance was offered to the downward trend of values. Among Kaffirs, Anglo-American Corporation suffered a set-back, and several other finance shares were easier, but Far Easterns held up well, with Sub-Nigel again in good request on the publication of the news of the striking of the reef in the vertical shaft. It was noticeable that not many of the low-priced descriptions came on offer. Rhodesians were dullish under the lead of Chartered, considerable offering of which met with little response. Tanganyika were also a dull spot, notwithstanding the imminence of proposals for dealing with the Debs.

SHARP RELAPSE IN OILS.

ANGLO-AMERICANS RECEDE ON DENIAL OF BONUS RUMOURS.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Fears of a further advance in the Bank rate were responsible for a sharp set-back in Oil Shares yesterday. A good deal of business was transacted, but it was mostly in the nature of sales, and right from the start an easier tendency was noticeable, while in the afternoon the market became distinctly dull, some heavy declines being finally recorded in the leaders and other favourites. Eagles and Burmahs were the chief sufferers among the leading descriptions, although Shells showed a substantial loss. British Borneos moved down sharply, and Anglo-American and British Burmahs also receded. The official denial of the bonus rumours led to an appreciable set-back in Anglo-American Oils. Kern Rivers were distinctly dull, and Lobitos and Anglo-Ecuadorian moved down. Roumanian Consolidated and Premier Oils closed easier. To-day is the last day for dealing in Premier Oil "A" letters." From to-morrow onwards the shares will be dealt in fully paid. Closing prices were:—

RUBBER SHARES DULL.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The price of rubber was unchanged at 2s. 5½d. per lb. There was something of a set-back in the Share market yesterday upon rumours that to-day will see the Bank rate advance further to 7 per cent. Movements were not all in one direction, however, and a fair number of rises were scattered through the list. Rubber Trust were down ⅛, with sellers at 43s. Anglo-Dutch offered at 53s. 9d., and Bukit Kajang at 82s. 9d. Carey United reacted ⅛ to 57s. 6d., and Java Invest. weakened to 46s., while there are sellers of Malayalam at 49s. 6d. Nirmala Ord. showed a further decline at 26s. 3d. United Sua Betong were lower at 5⅛.

Rubber shares were bought up to 50s. in the Foreign section, while Batoh were sellers at 4s. 11d., and Merlimau offered at 7s. 2½d. In the Borneo group Kimanis were very firm at 26s., but Langkon reacted to 23s. Manchester N.B. were in demand in the morning, with transactions around 45s. 6d., but towards the finish sellers came in at 44s. 3d. North Borneo, State Rubber changed hands around 18s. 9d. Sekong hardened to 22s. 3d.

THE MONEY MARKET.

BANK RATE FEARS.

Bank Rate (changed Nov. 6) ..... 6 p.c.

The Money market was unsettled yesterday, and the general tone remained very cautious, the possibility of a further advance in the Bank rate in the near future being a matter of fairly general discussion. Funds in the Loan market were more than sufficient to go round, and the rate for call money fell to 4 p.c., after being 4½ p.c. Weekly and other short dated fixtures were mostly arranged at 4½ p.c. Discounts were quiet, and rates hard, takers showing more caution than ever. The general rate for two to six months' bank drafts was 5⅞ to 5¾ p.c., but short paper was taken down to 5½ p.c.
